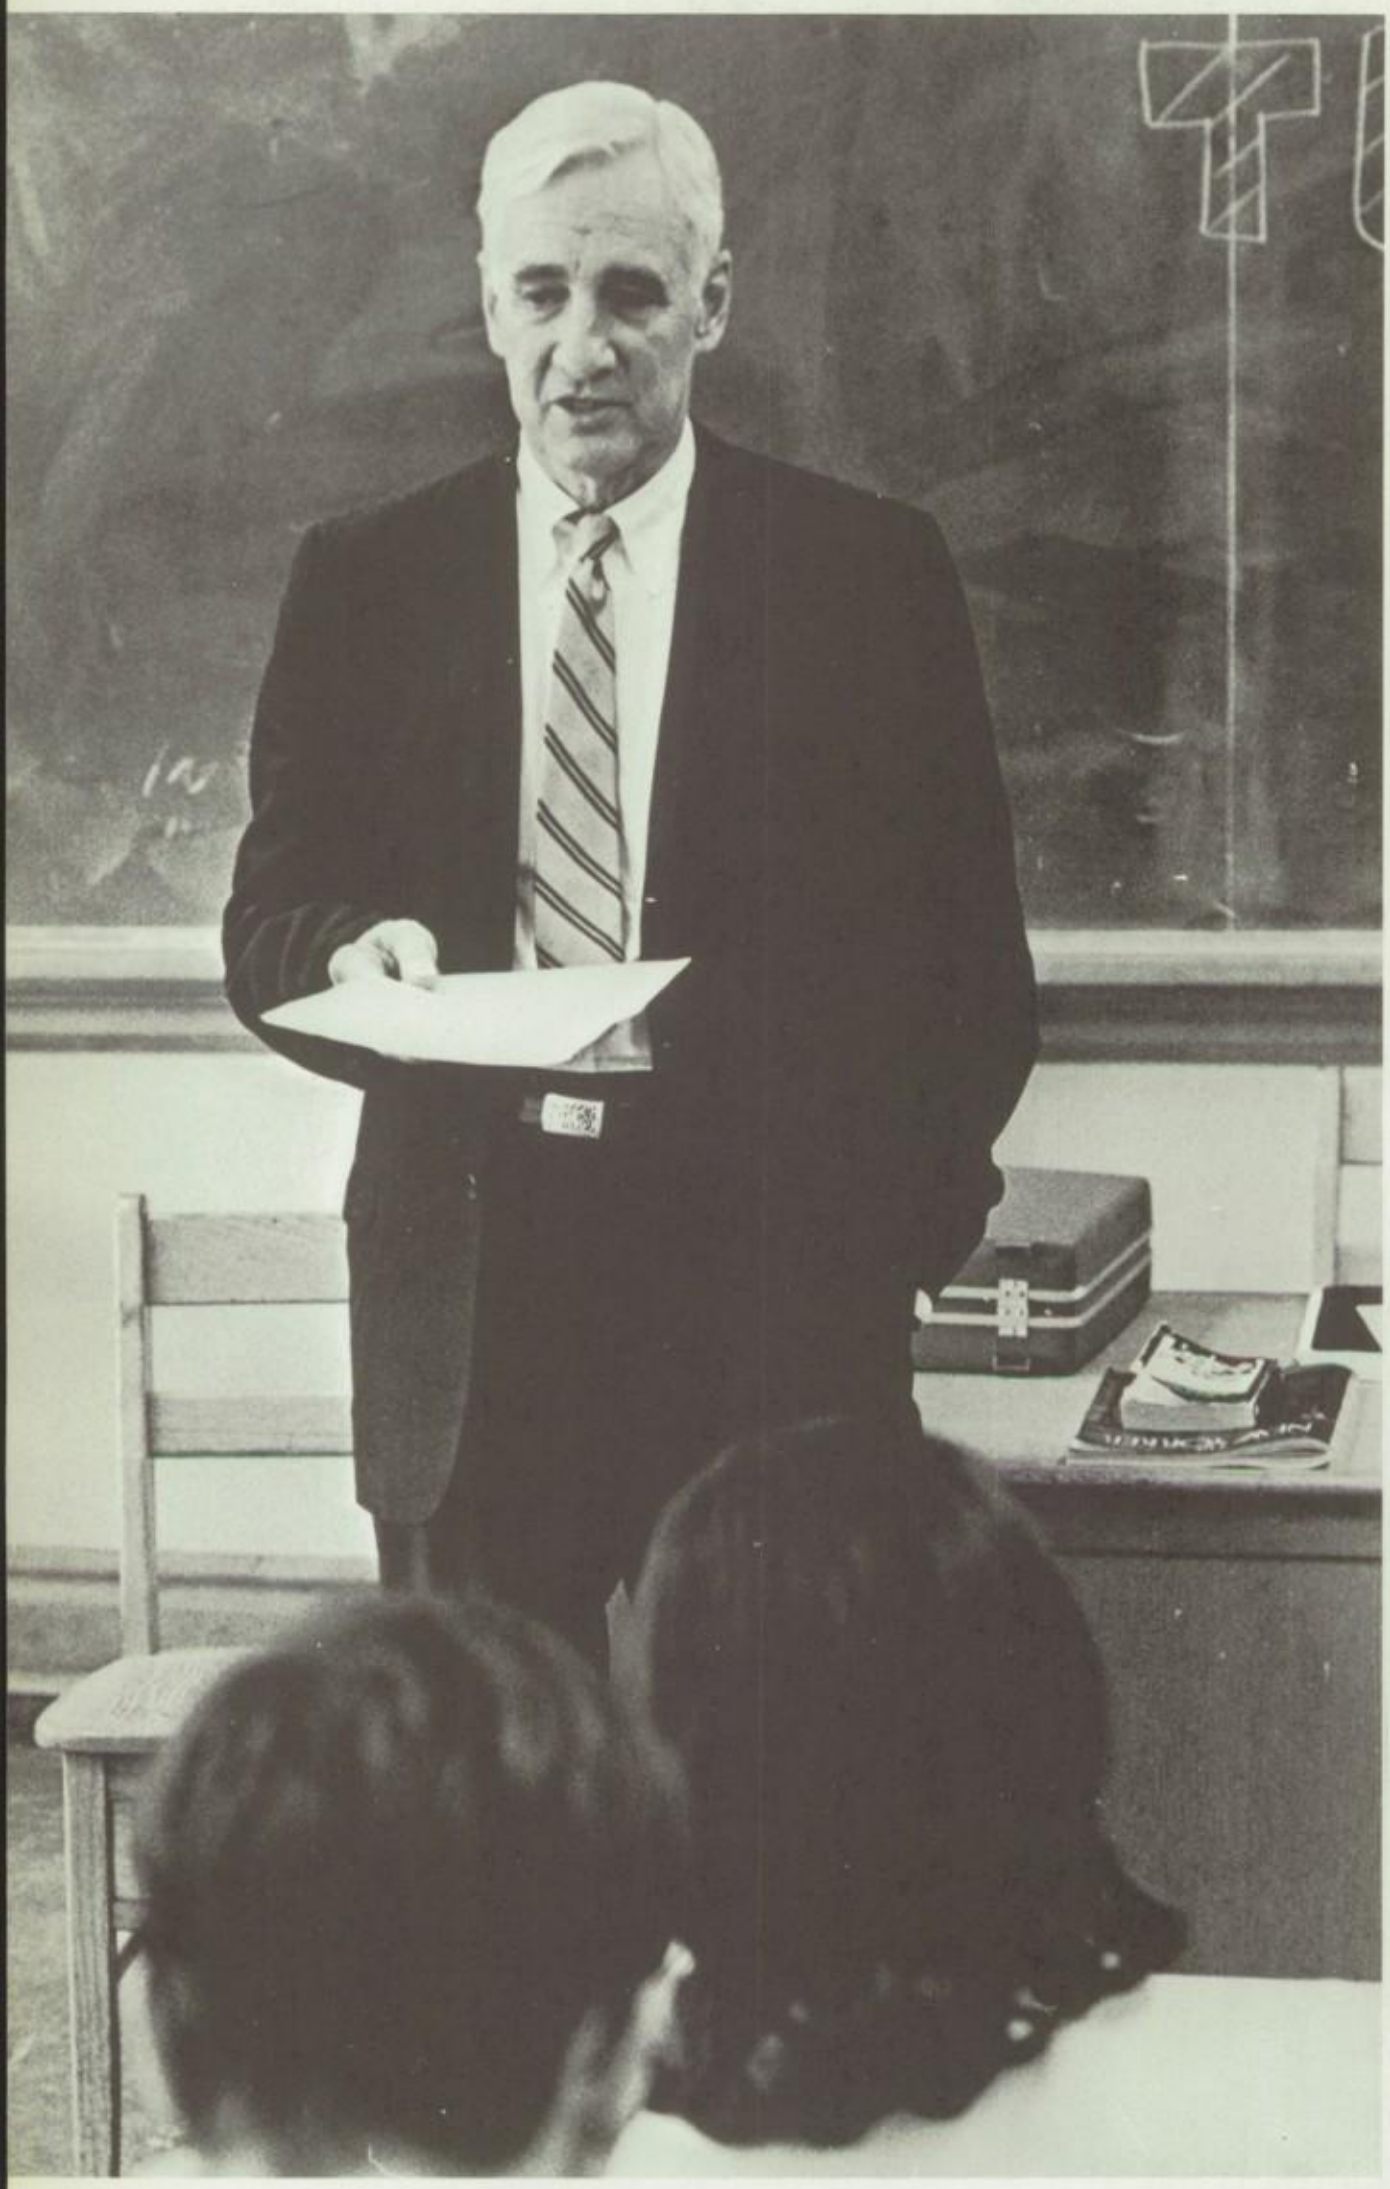
Resurgent force propels spirited beat of Douglas Southall Freeman

1968 Historian

Thirteenth Annual Publication
Richmond, Virginia

Wincing at the brightness of the early morning sun, Tommy Young grasps the billowing ends of the flag while Joedy Smith determines a secure fastening.



Robed in a stately blue gown, a senior member of the National Honor Society inducts an outstanding Rebel. With this noble recognition emerge additional responsibilities for the student to the school and to the community.

Interchange of ideas

Projecting the knowledge he has acquired through the years, English teacher Walter Gladding illuminates and expands a new facet for student discovery. His wisdom and enthusiasm create a thirst for learning and a need for individual pursuits.

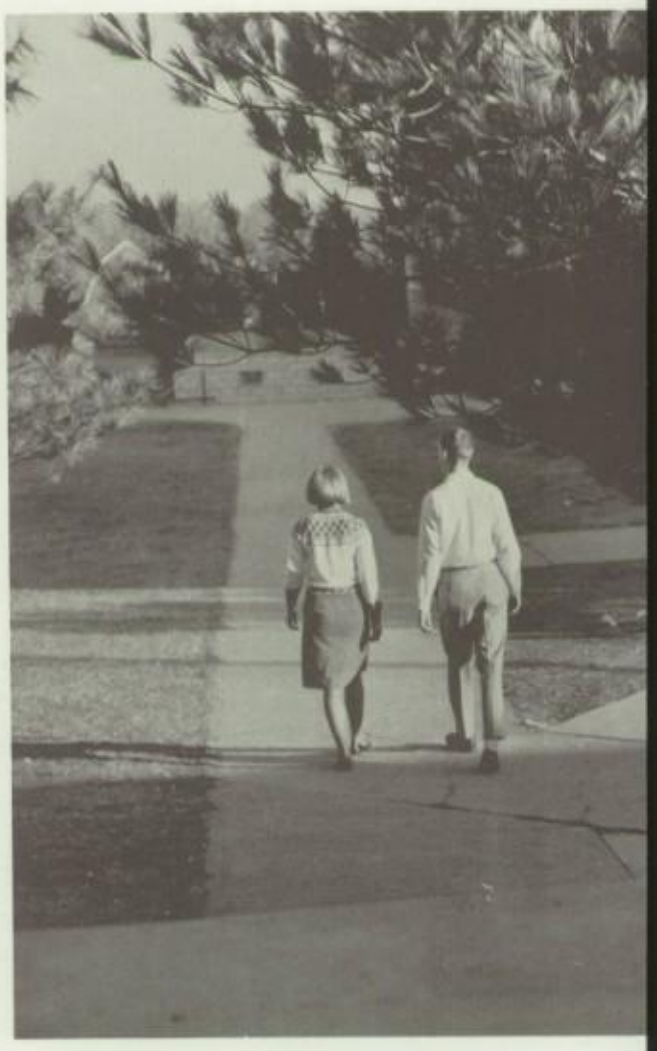
"Now we're alone!" Bounding over the sofa, Pete Strang startles the audience with his character interpretations. Squeals of laughter erupt at the escapades of the amorous couple.

Transfers of knowledge from teachers to pupils, Rebels to Rebels

Eyeing the band, a Rebel waits for her cue to perform. During her routine, she must prompt enthusiasm within her fellow students.

Serene afternoon strolls afford Freemanites an opportunity to chat with their friends and share the unusual occurrences of the school day.



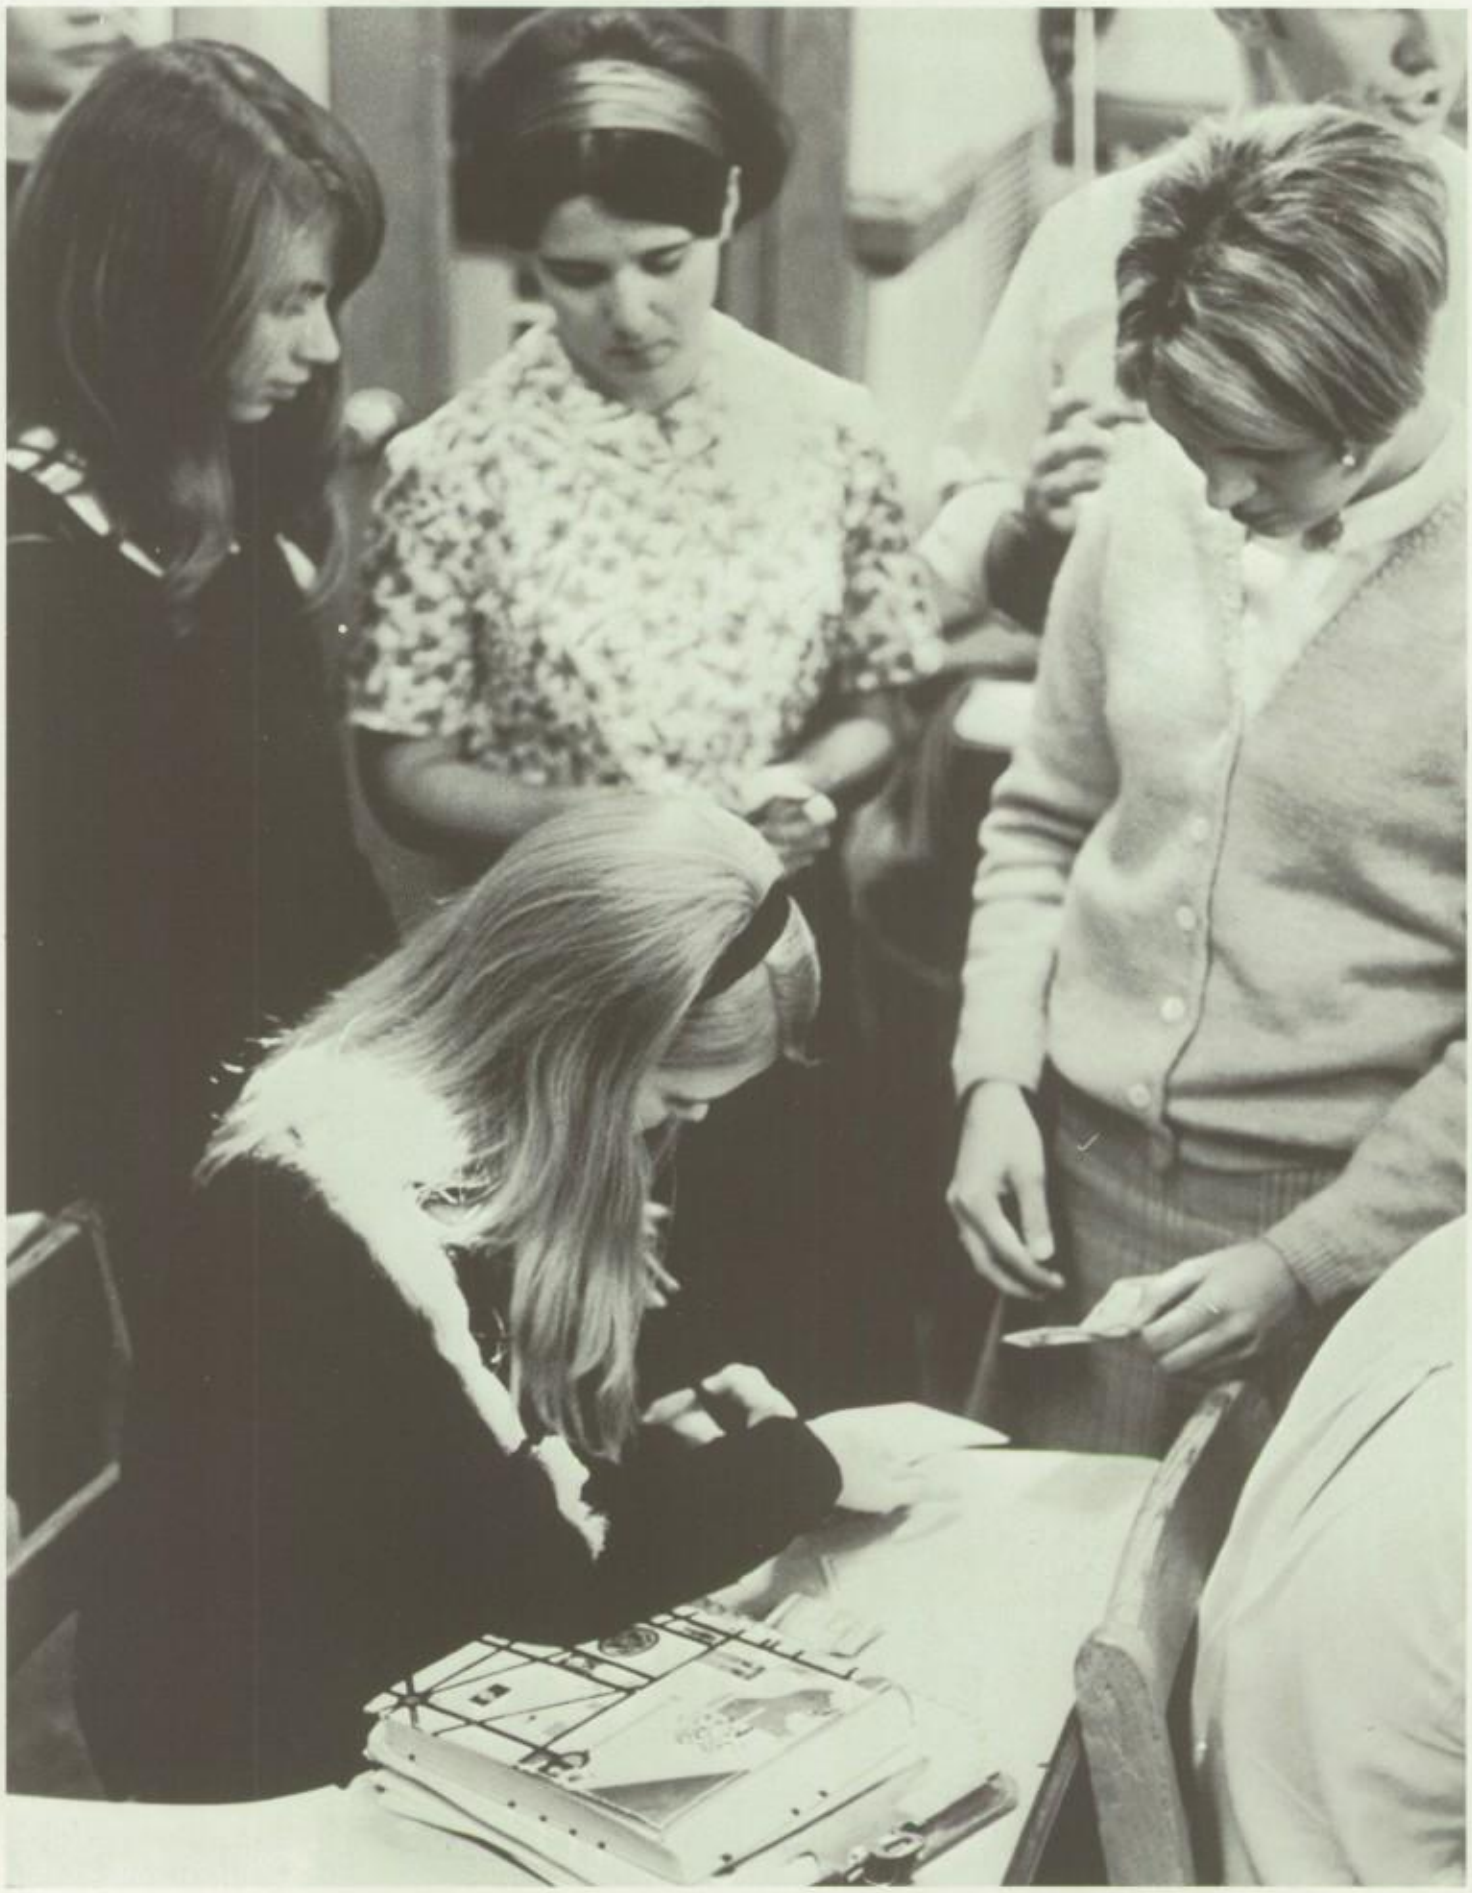
Listening to the inquiries of her junior assistant, a yearbook section editor recalls her own past experiences and applies her knowledge to the problem. Publications temper Rebels for the pressures, responsibilities, and relationships of adulthood.

stimulate inner growth

Bewildered by the vibrancy of a Douglas Freeman football game, two curious youngsters explore the world of which their fathers, Coach Ray Long and alumni Paul Dickenson, were and are so much a part.

Student life encourages communication of ideas

Eyes sober with compassion, a mouth gasping with astonishment—Rebel actors make characters come alive during the Night of One-Acts. Through involvement in a particular role, an entertainer assumes a personality different from his own. Acquaintance with this new character prods an individual's sense of perception, expanding and strengthening it. His audience learns by his reflections and behavior.



Scribbled carbon copies fill Debbie Hughes' book as she writes publications receipts for Joan Spears, Mary Beth Richardson, and Pattie Greybill.

Freemanites exchange beaches for books in return to school

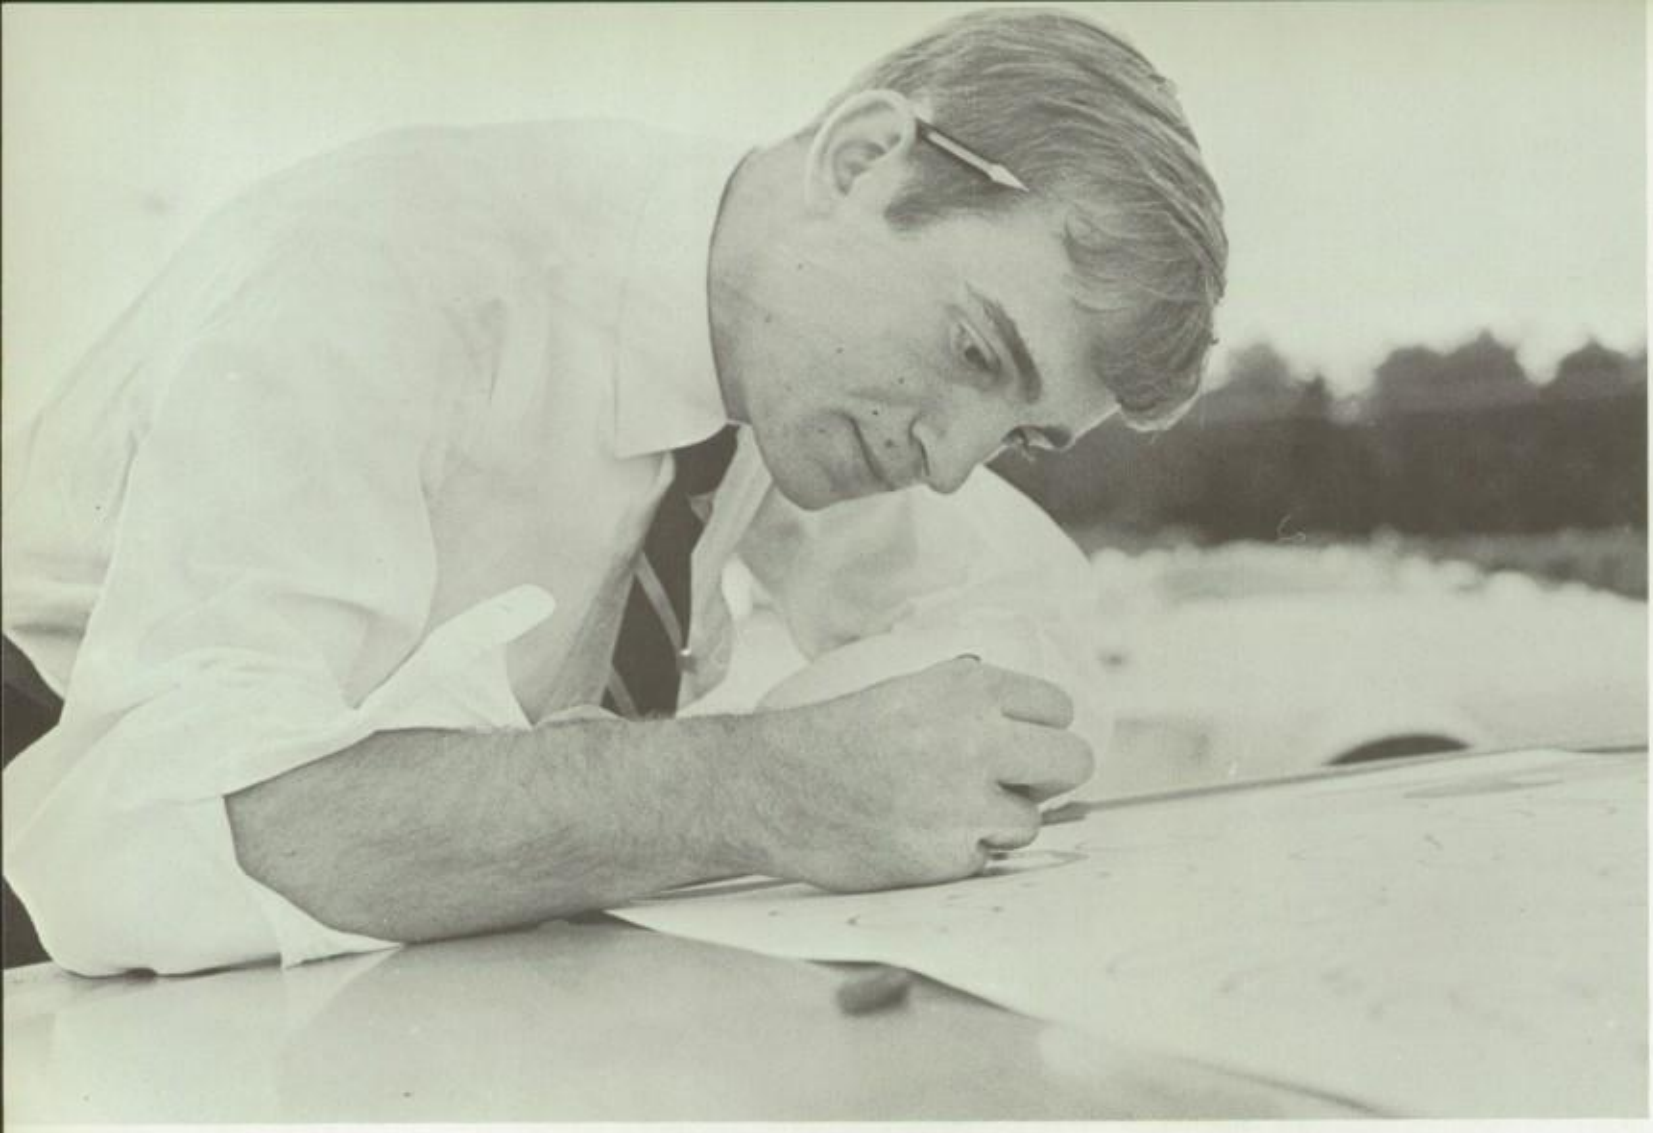
Searing sun still beckoning, the parking lot filled and Rebels entered Douglas Freeman ready to face the unique challenges of the new year. Separate emotions of fear, pride, bewilderment, and happiness showed on faces in the crowded halls, but these expressions soon disappeared as students found their places in the corporate student body of over fifteen hundred.

At the opening assembly, AFS student Ann Dimaano received a warm welcome as she greeted her new American friends. In October, excitement rippled through the school when students received long-awaited annuals.

As summer unmasqued into autumn, workmen broke the ground for the school's addition. It included an extension of the library, space for the art, music, health, industrial arts, and business departments, and extra classroom facilities and science laboratories, DSF's first air-conditioned rooms for students.

Exhausted from hours of demanding practice, Robbie VandenBrock slumps while Coach Jim Sangston clips tape from his ankles. Larry Bowman joins Charlie Long in a fixed stare as he waits his turn.

In the late afternoon emptiness of the upstairs hall, Patsy Lowery stoops to exchange books, and Debbie Straub waits to add another volume to the locker which they share.



Letters emerge as Marvin Tiller with sleeves rolled up and pencil behind his ear, shades in outlines on the homecoming banner. The result of long planning and hard work was a colorful Harvest Festival.

Sweethearts of service clubs acquire regal titles at Homecoming

Lost in a maze of crepe paper, tissue flowers, scotch tape, and chicken wire, harried Rebels completed floats begun weeks before as they worked until only a few minutes before Homecoming.

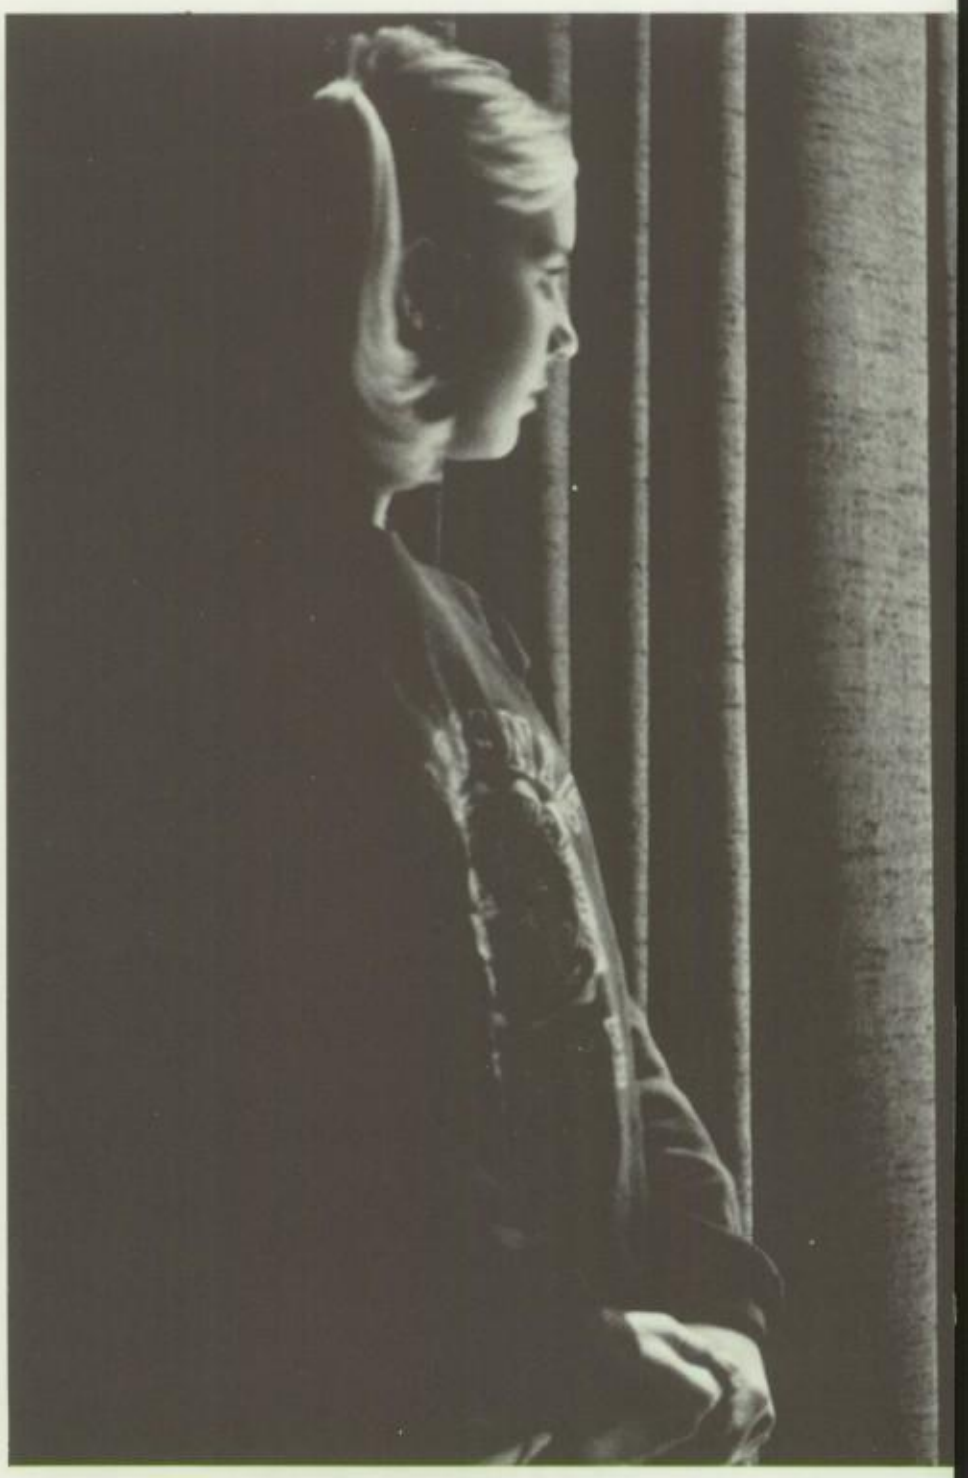
The floats, carrying the thirty-three princesses, circled the field as a prelude to the John Marshall game and preview of the half-time activities. Key Club members escorted the princesses from the field to seats at the fifty-yard line.

During the half, students, parents, and alumni applauded queen Linda Reeder and her maid-of-honor, Jenny Kanary. The new royalty rounded the field on the winning Medical Arts Club float as the Rebels and Justices prepared to meet in the second half.

Newly-crowned Harvest Festival Queen Linda Reeder beams her gratitude at the applauding half-time crowd.

Lighted faces and sparkling eyes mirror the thrill of Homecoming for Carol Young, Princess Marilyn Rogers, and Ginger Neill as they parade around the field.

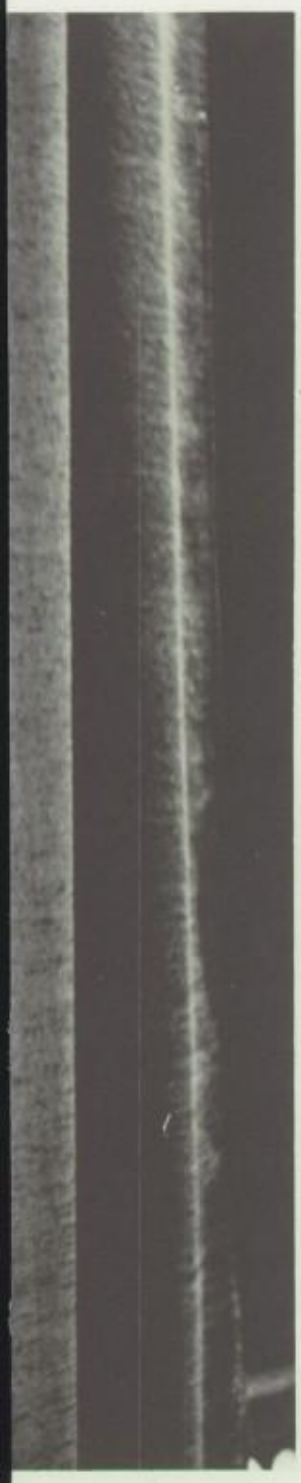
Ginger Carrol (Connie Ryan) wringing her hands in anticipation of an onstage prompt, waits amid the confusion of a side wing.

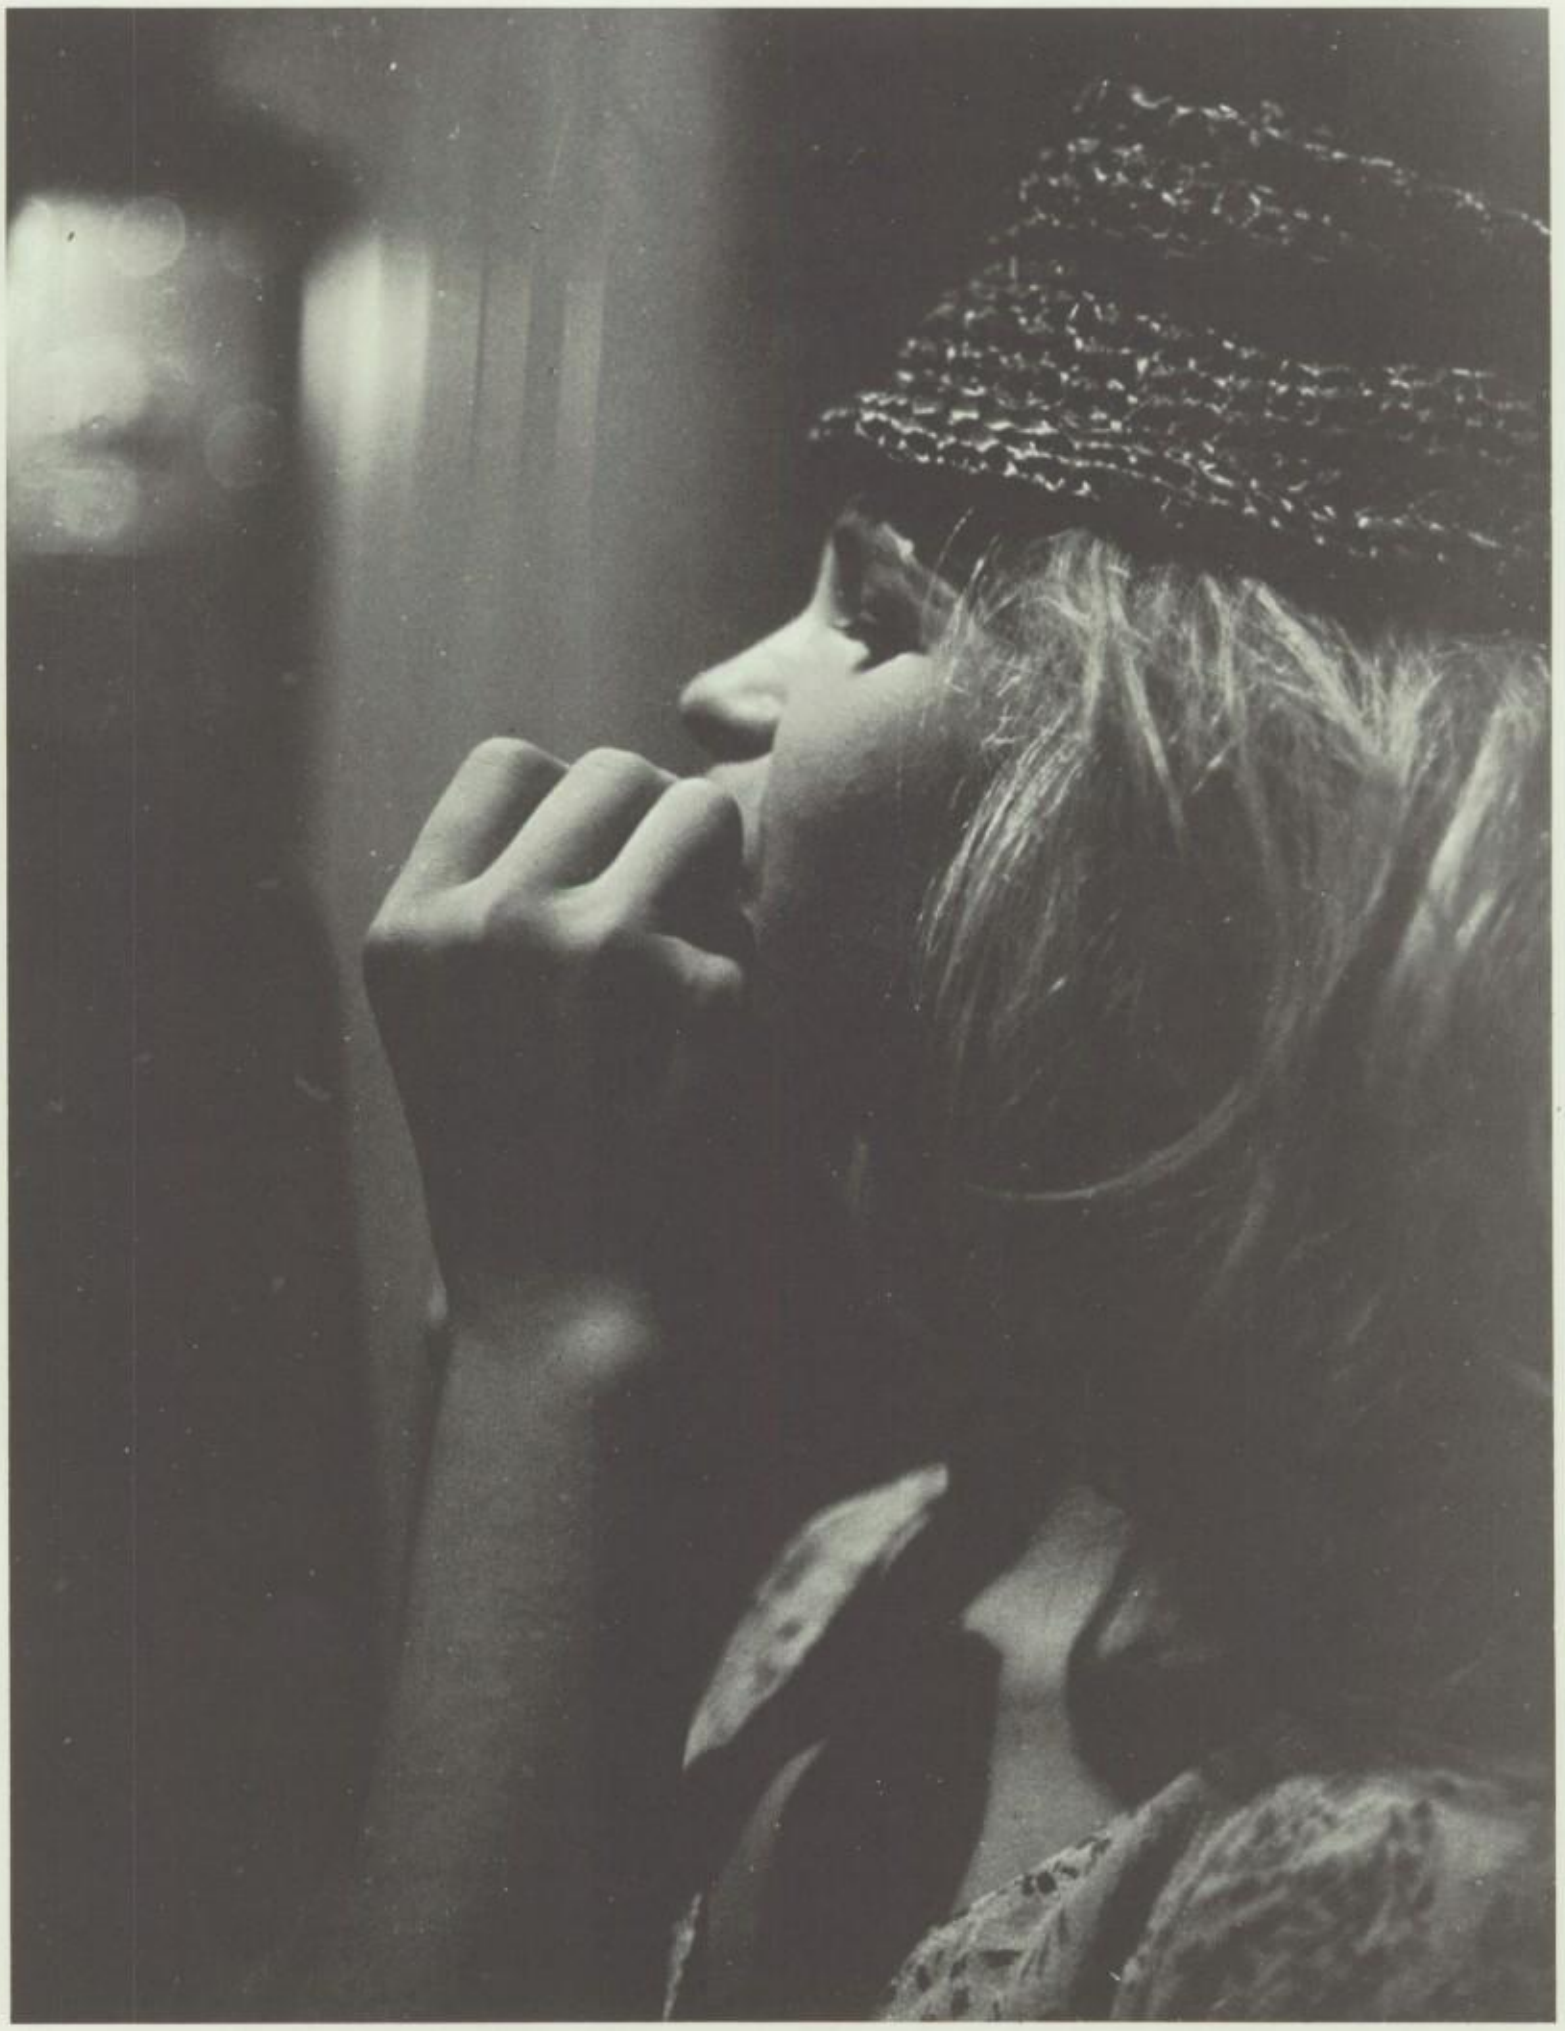


Ed Hoffman (Clark Cooper) babbles wildly as he recalls a conversation previously held with his wife over the antics of Howard at the school football game.

"No wonder your father has ulcers, Eddie," mumbles Howard Carol (Sam Maupin) to Eddie (Les Waldbauer).

As action moves to stage-right, Agnes (Kay Matthews) and Mr. Wilson (Geoff Bull) observe Howard's capers.





A steady hand applies the final touch of make-up to Lizzie (Susan Baugham). It's 7:45, opening night for "Ginger."

Lights dimmed and silence reigned. The tension and strained nerves of weeks of rehearsal vanished behind the practiced masques of senior actors as they met their cues in Ronald Alexander's "Time Out for Ginger," directed by drama teacher Al Biddle.

Because of the Regional playoffs on Friday night, the curtain went up on Saturday and Monday, providing an opportunity for greater attendance.

On the Wednesday before Thanksgiving, the auditorium filled again, and Rebels saw the evidence of their generosity in the decorated baskets of canned goods for charity.

Stunt-Talent Night marks the debut of many aspiring talents. For their first appearance Mike Kearney, Janice Thomas, and Freddy Finn sing a medley of "Going Out of My Head" and "Girl from Ipanema."

Whistling as the band plays "Dixie," former assistant principal D. E. Baggett returns to a Rebel pep rally with a delegation of his Tuckahoe elementary pupils. Presenting a Confederate flag, Robert Winstead and Gail Shipstedt represent the 600 boys and girls who contributed their nickels and dimes to replace the flags destroyed by vandals.

Tempted beyond restraint by the last remnants of a short-lived February snow, four Rebels relieve tensions with a jestful snow battle

Lifeless bodies sprawl on the floor of a wrecked saloon after a brawl staged by the IRC at Stunt-Talent Night Skit.

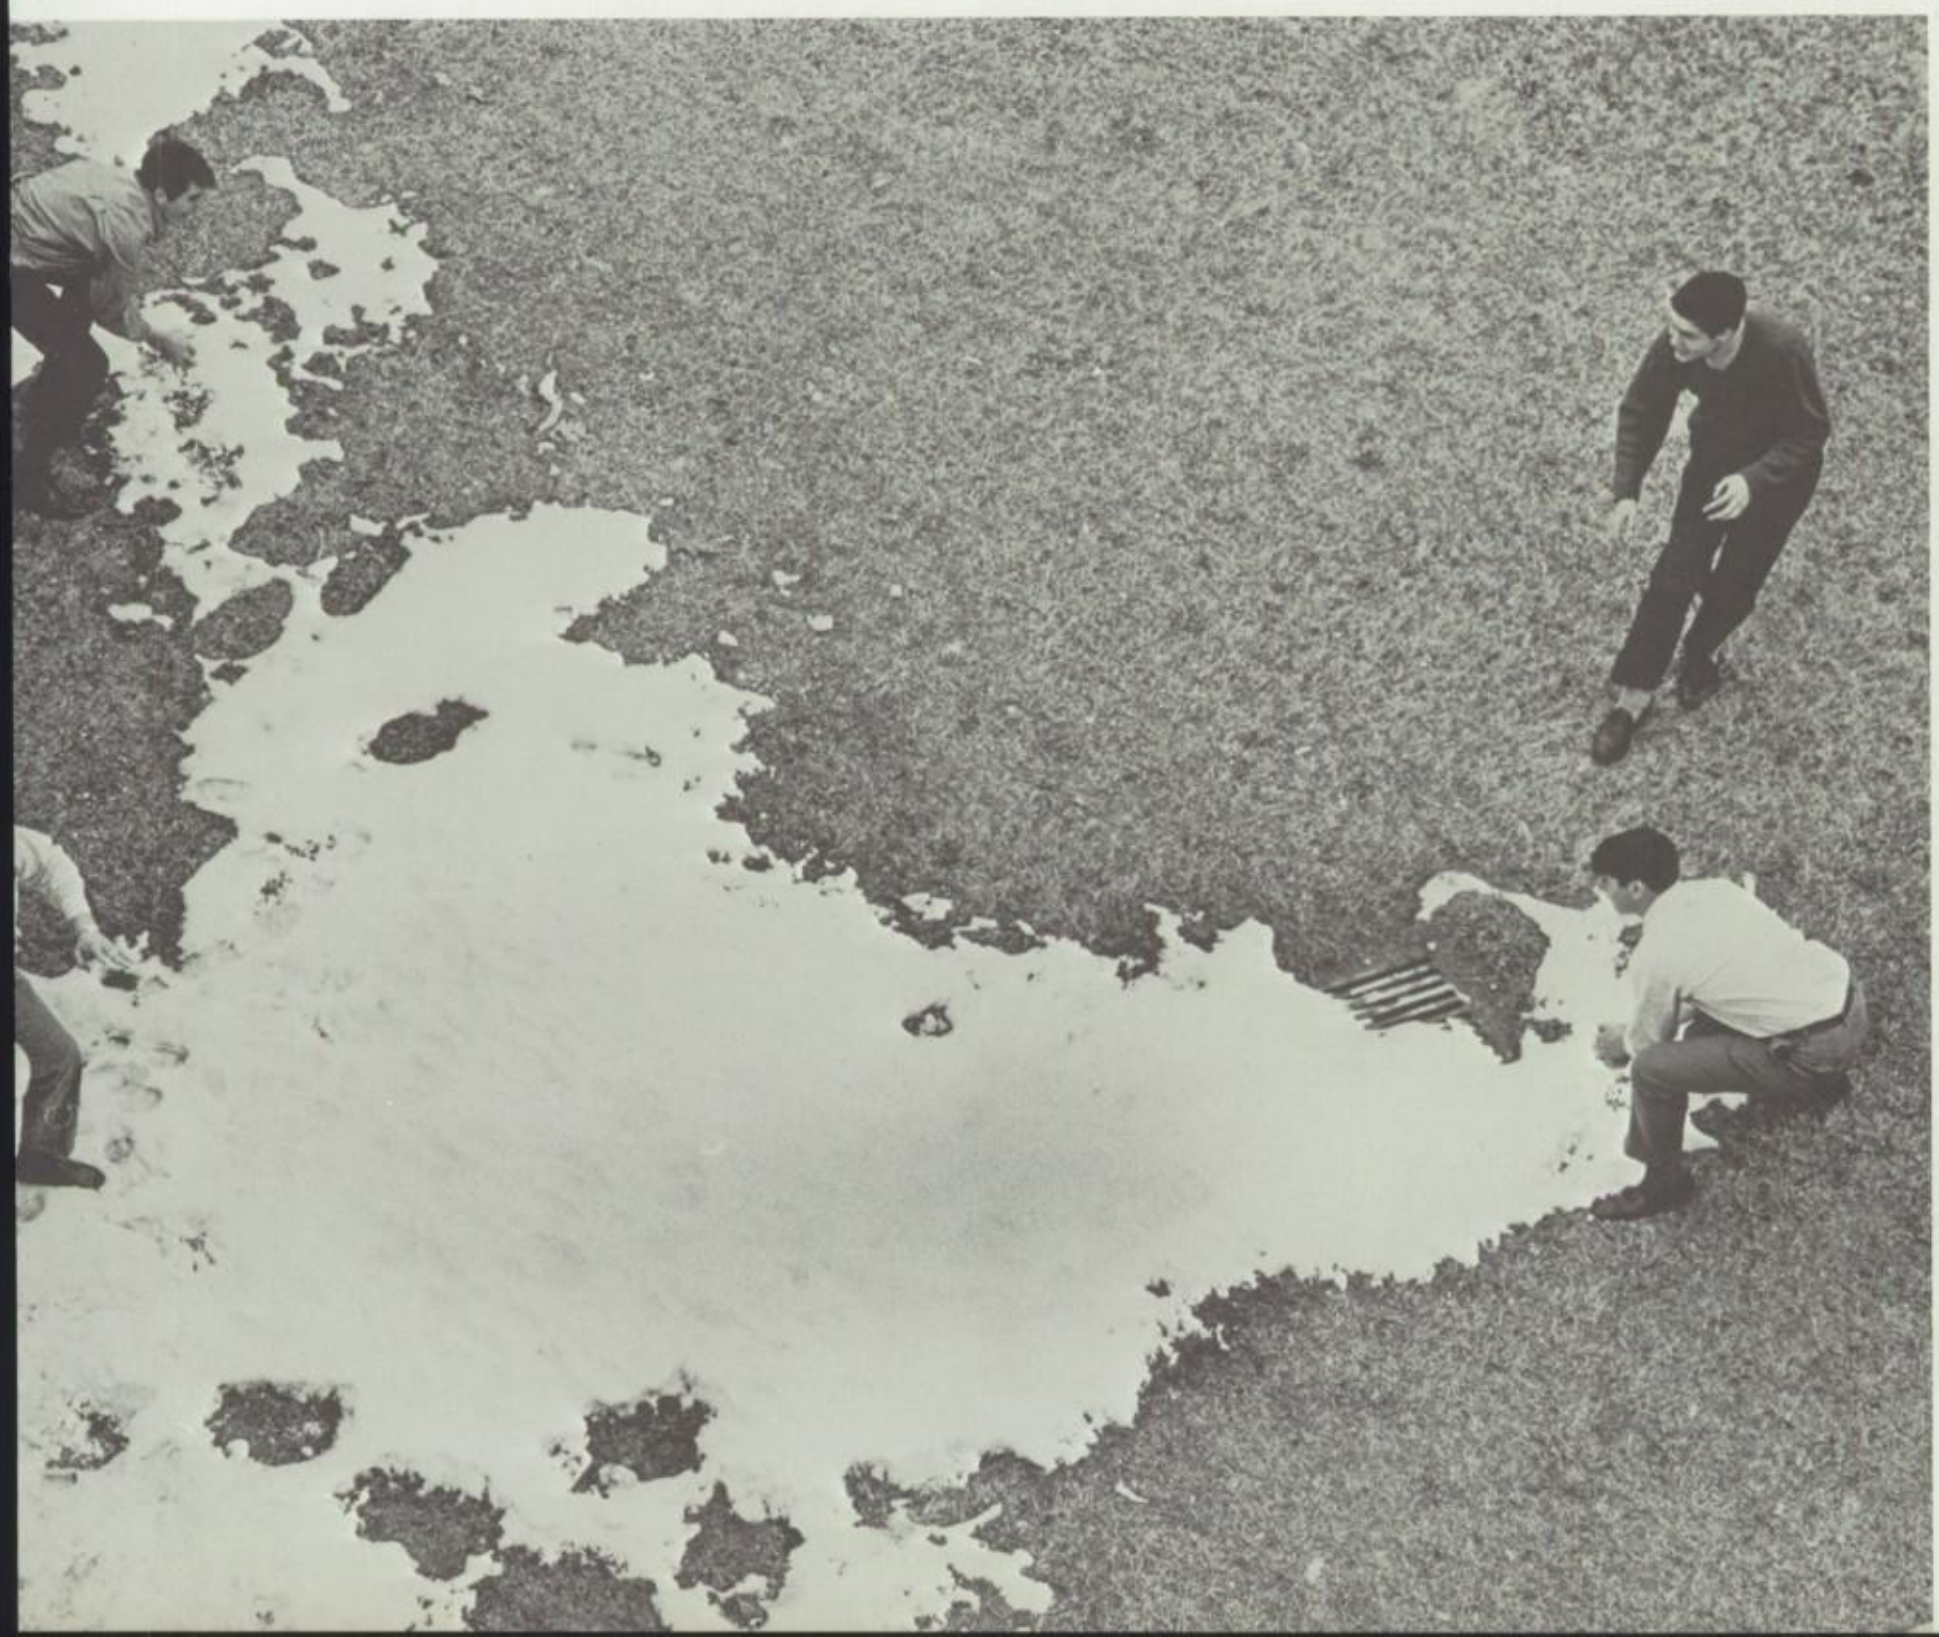
Seniors anticipate caps, gowns; juniors relish rings; sophomores look forward to prom

As the chilly wind blew winter in, seniors caught their first glimpse of graduation. The occasion was a visit from the Balfour representative, who took orders for caps, gowns, and calling cards and left the juniors with shiny new school rings.

Hosting college boards, the school took on a somber atmosphere, which disappeared as sophomore decorations for their "Ice Palace" took shape.

December flying by, Freemanites slowed their hectic schedules of dances, tests, basketball games, and Christmas shopping to collect clothes and food for needy families. They presented these before the Thespian inhabitants of Pleasant Grove at the Christmas Assembly.

Forgetting the anxiety of exams, Rebels roared at Stevie Gleason and "the Honeymooners" in Stunt-Talent Night, and then plunged into the new semester.



Home! Robert LaFerriere, impatient with the students who crowd the conventional routes to the buses, scrambles over the fence and toward the tiny patch of vacant cement between walkers.

Senior scholars topple opposition on quiz show test, win honors for DSF

Cameras zeroed in and bright lights flashed on the four high school bowl team scholars. On TV, points from quick responses added up to a DSF victory.

Emphasis on intellectual achievement was continued as upperclassmen filled the auditorium for the dignified National Honor Society tapping. Two weeks later another crowd gathered in the same auditorium as the drama classes presented the One-Act plays.

Planning early for the following year, the SCA sponsored the election of new officers. Campaigning hopefuls cluttered the halls with posters. After a speech by each candidate, the students chose Richard Knapp, Randy Brown, Pam Weed, and Peter Dierks.

Mrs. Margaretta Stephens stops to confer with Miss Ada Land on committee changes in the school philosophy.

Mischievously, Pete Strang spies on his future mother-in-law's antics with her would-be lover. His capers create the climax of "The Trysting Place."

Relief. Finished with another day of books, tests, and club meetings, Freemanites heading homeward pass through the library construction which temporarily mars the face of Douglas Freeman.

Senior sponsor Mrs. Ann Pounds and four members of the court capture different moods during the prom.

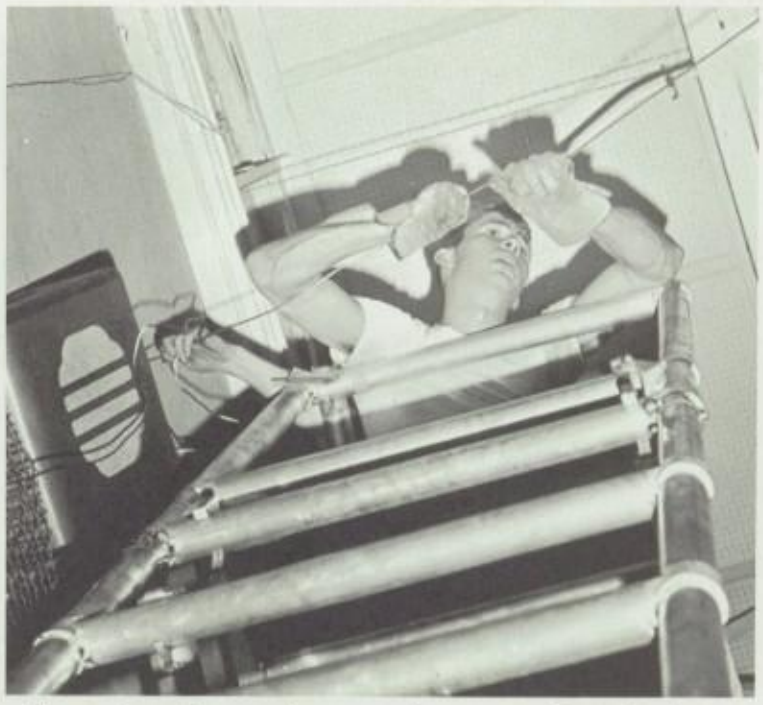
Linda Reeder, Jon Deans reign as queen, king in Grecian temple

Cummerbunds, corsages, rustling dresses, nervous fingers pinning boutonnieres, the long-awaited ring of the doorbell, the excitement of the band's rhythm vibrating to meet each new arrival—a world of enchantment spread before seniors as they entered the prom.

At 9:00 p.m. the crowd made room for the twelve couples of the court, who glided into the forms of a pinwheel, DF, and 68, and hushed to hear the announcement of Linda Reeder and Jon Deans as queen and king and attendants Debbie Hughes and Clyde Blanton.

The tempo changed as the music of The Swinging Machine replaced "Three Coins in a Fountain," and the class danced away their summer evening.

Donating his masculine strength and dexterity, junior Steve Bassett helps senior girls make favors for the prom.

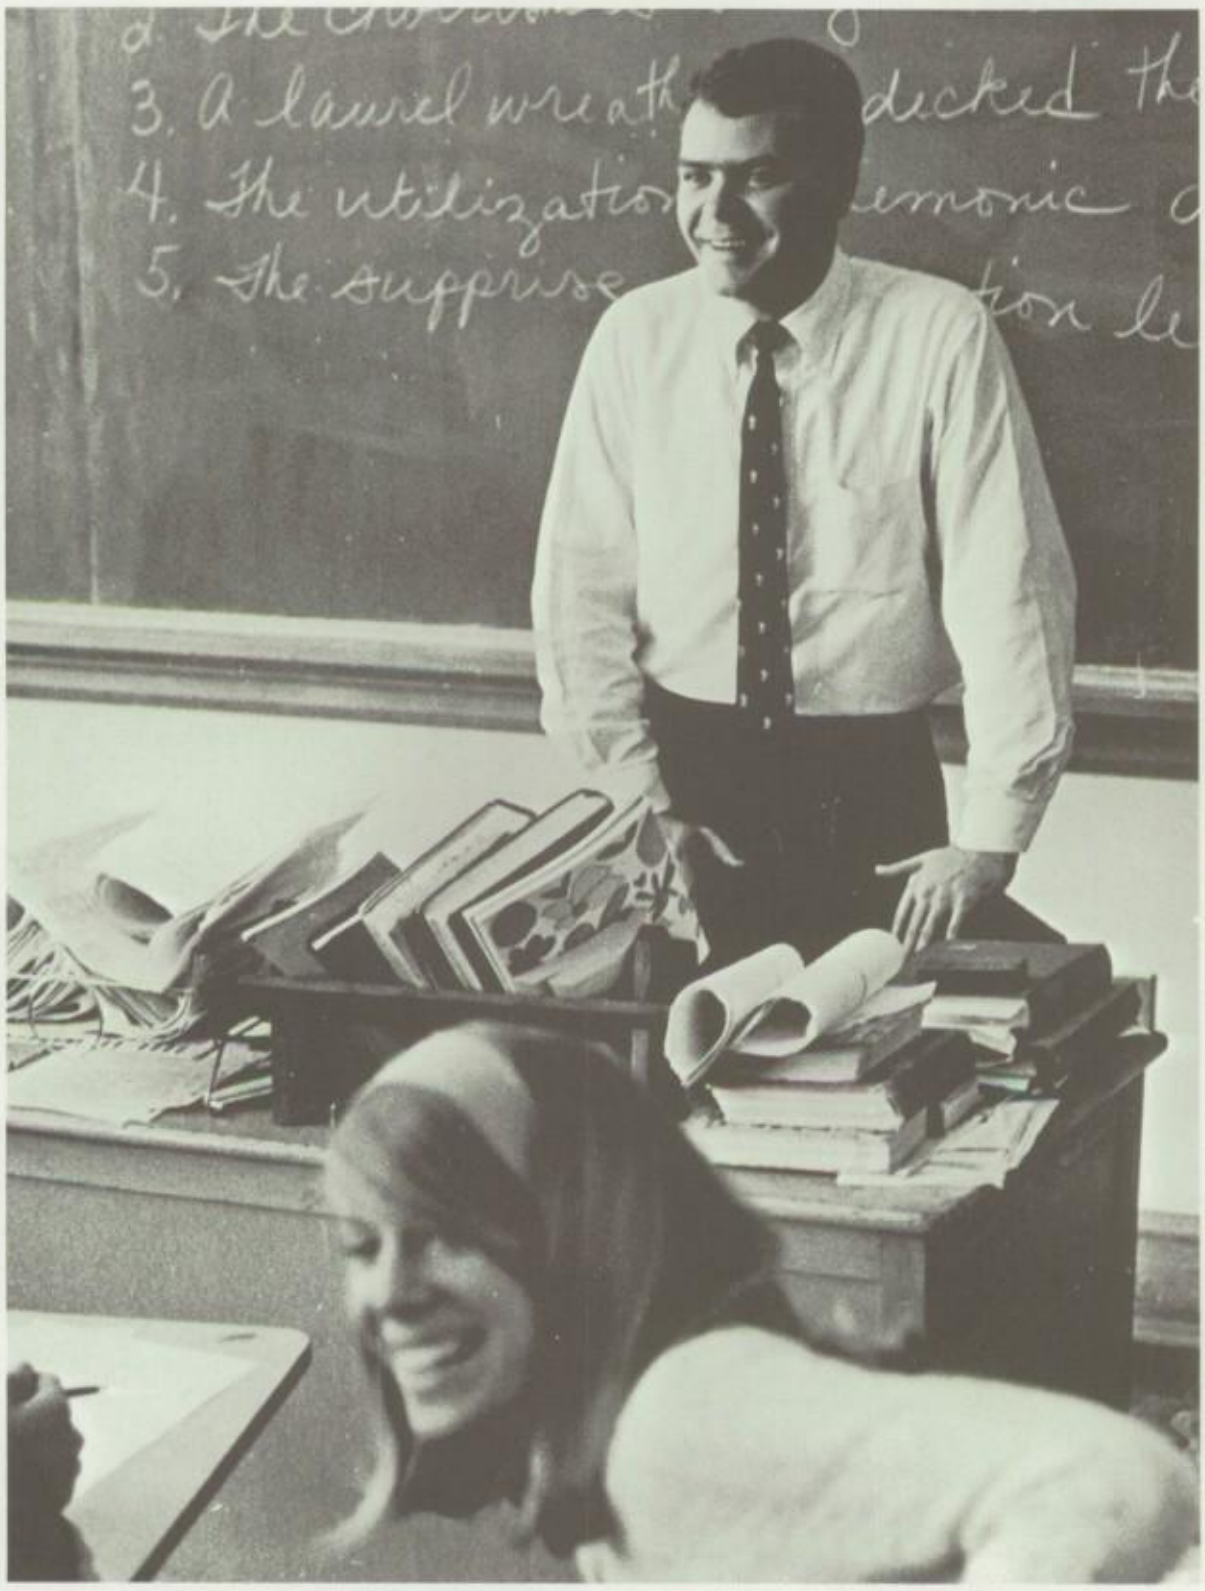


Three hands are better than two. Ray Parham employs help to adjust the prom's PA system.

Gol-ly! Amid the glamor, crown bearers Bernie Dickinson and Robert Winstead await their part in the evening as the king's crowning draws near.

Beaming, Linda Reeder and Jon Deans reflect on their coronation as they reign over their subjects at the prom.

Pop! Mary Hubbard giggles in embarrassment as a rubber band from her braces shoots across the room. Bruce Armistead and Beverly Thurston share the moment with the rest of the school library.



"My Fair Lady" introduces spring to busy Rebels

Heavy coats and goose bumps disappeared. Spring came and with it spring fever. Term papers, tests and play practice denied Rebels the freedom they would soon enjoy in the summer.

The highlight of the juniors' year occurred in April, when the class presented its prom, "Paris by Night." After hours of concerted effort, the decorations materialized from rough ideas.

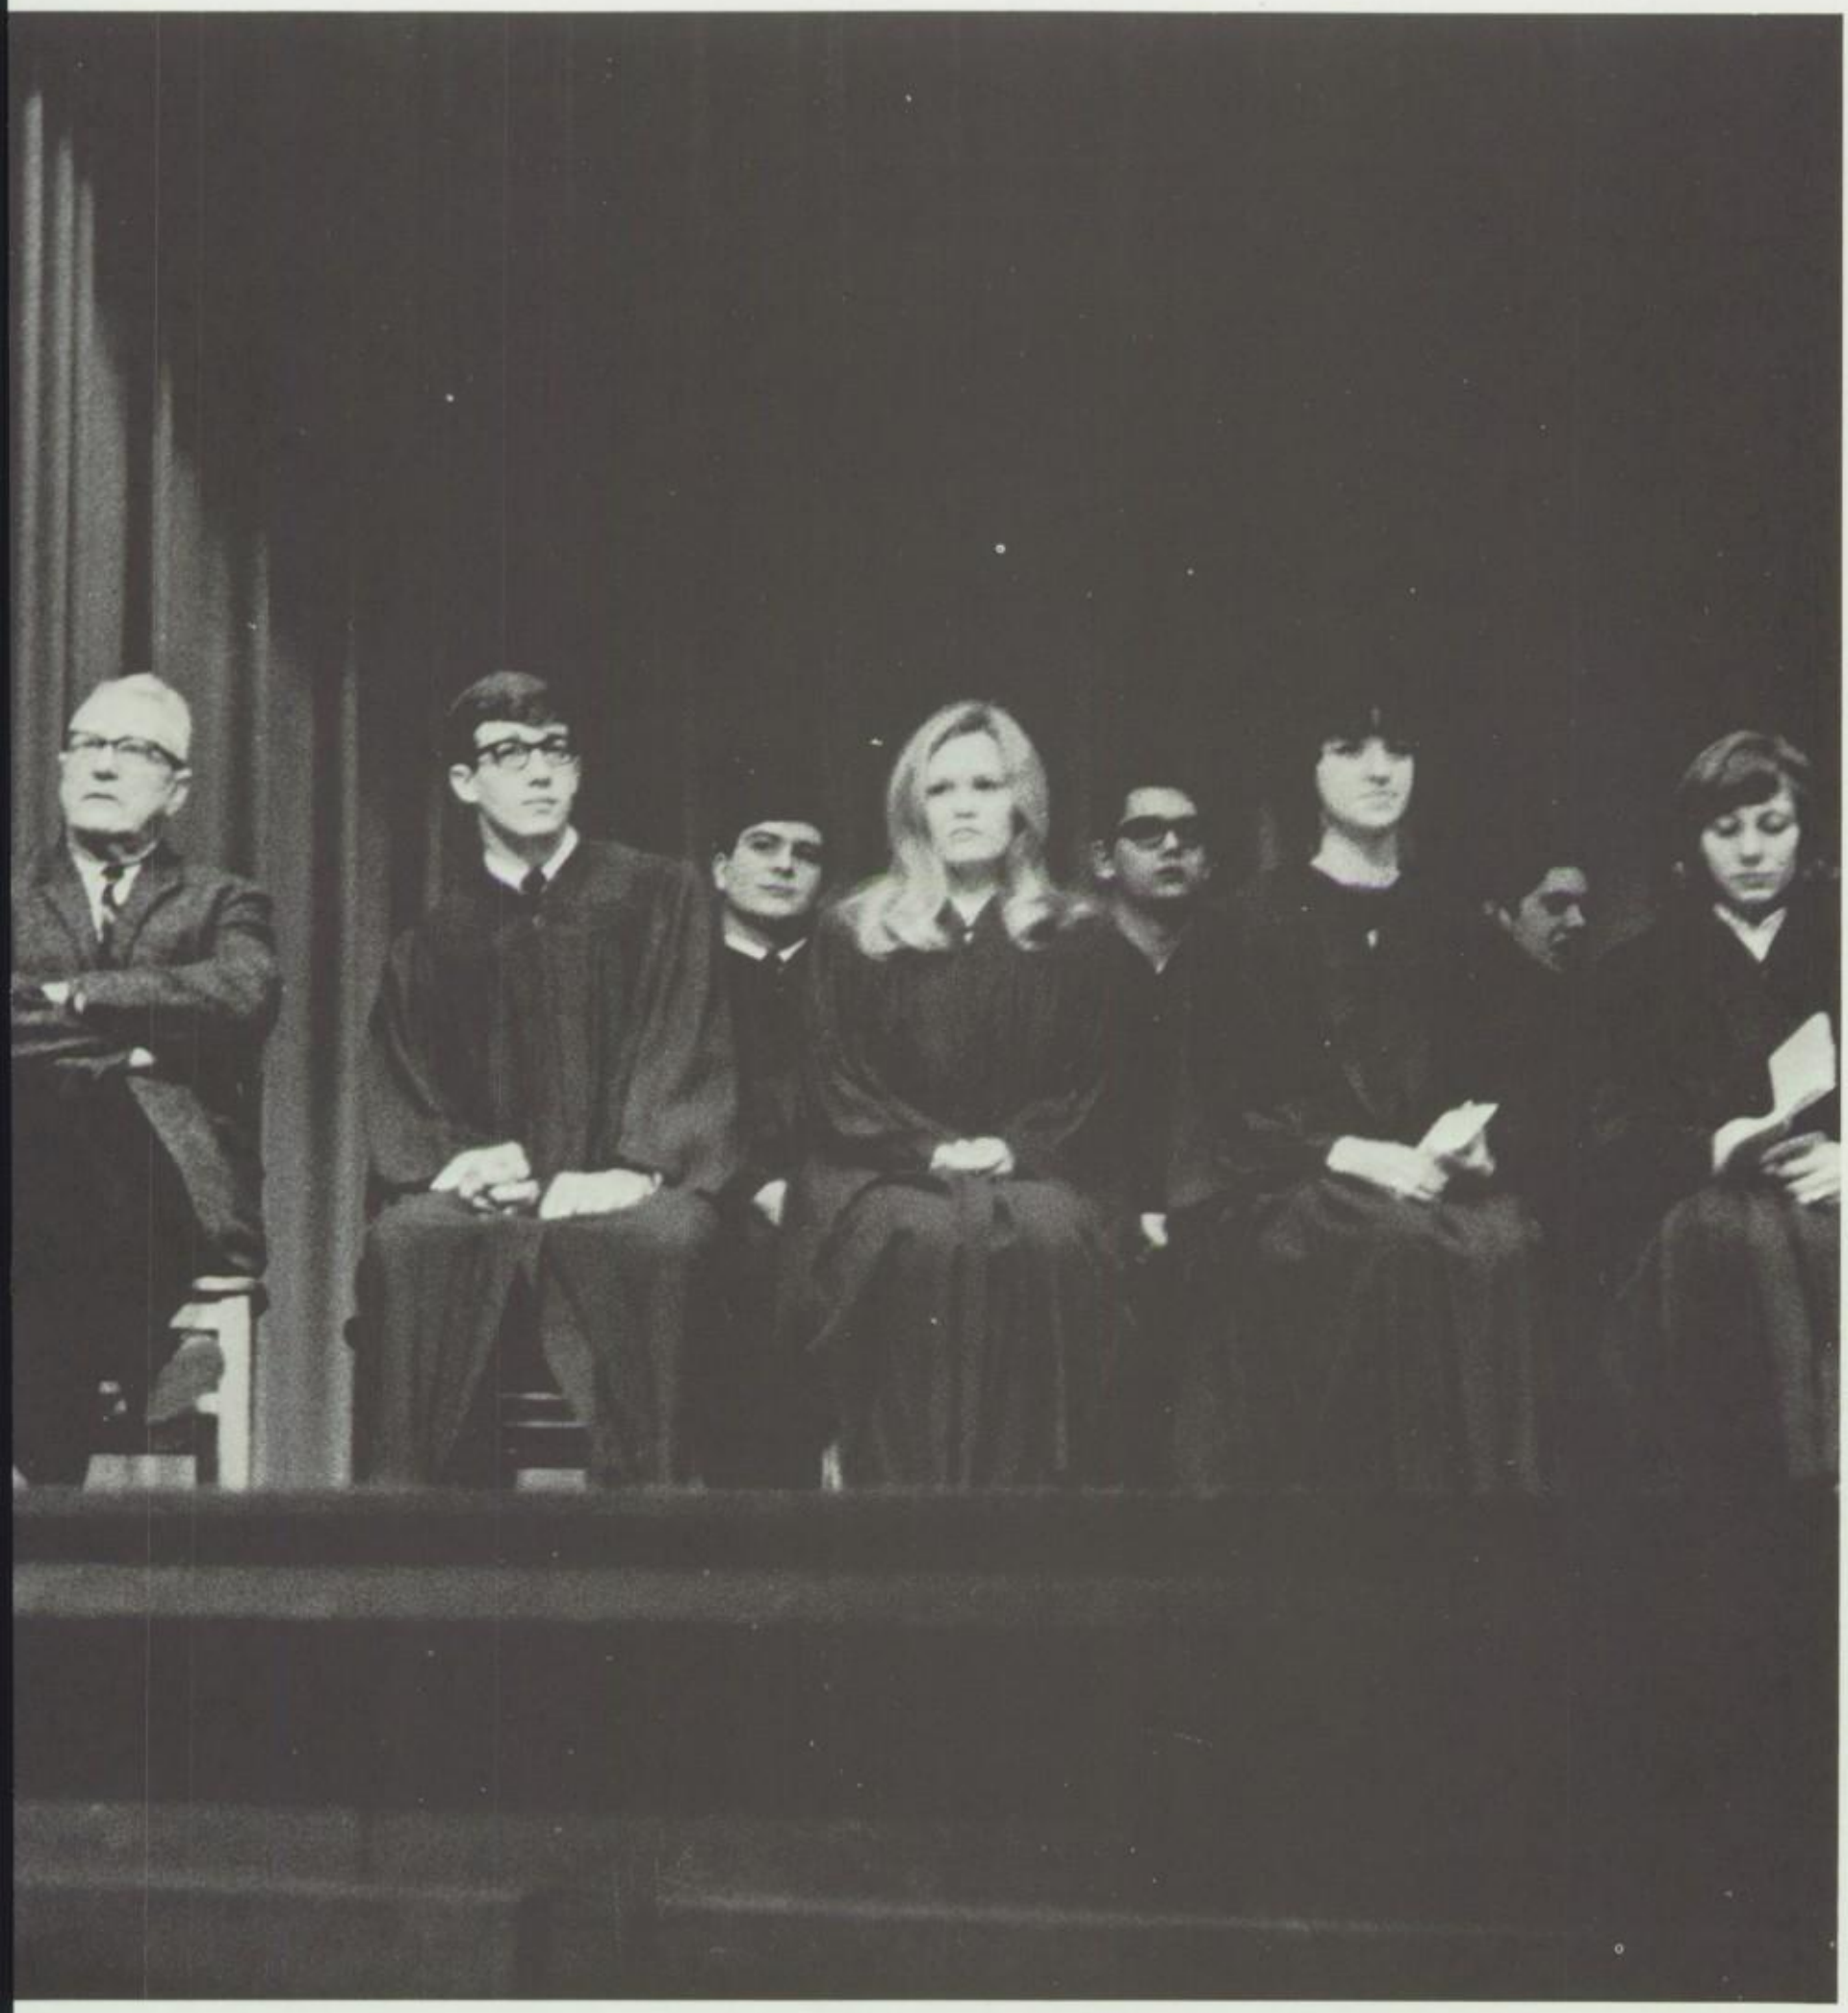
Actors reviewed lines, the make-up crew cleared away half-full jars of grease paint, and the prop crew replaced fallen pillows. Meanwhile a full house on the other side of the curtain awaited the Rebels' production of "My Fair Lady."

The year culminated in graduation. Seniors stood face to face with the future; juniors adjusted to their new positions of leadership, and sophomores advanced to a higher level of maturity. Releasing one class, DSF prepared to welcome another.

Misplaced modifiers on an English test become a joke to Ann Freeman and her boisterous classmates. Tensions relax and Mr. Clay and his lively juniors enjoy the humor of the mistake.

The long day is over. Two girls rest in the balmy afternoon breeze and chat away the minutes as they wait for their rides.

Rebels assimilate ideas through club activities



Lively marches of the Douglas Freeman band and the solemn junior tapping of the National Honor Society attest to the extensive variety of organizational activities. Through participation in extracurricular functions, students become more involved with the world around them. Suggestions of advisers and members introduce new streams of thought, and group projects mold relationships. A guest speaker at a meeting acquaints individuals with specific aspects of life by sharing his own experiences.

Georgetown or bust! Andy Dietz argues his point during a debate. The DSF team prepares for a trip to Georgetown where the National Debate Tournament will be held.

Invitation to Cherry Blossom Tournament honors DSF debaters

Excitement and determination swelled within Rebel debaters when they first discovered the national topic for the year, Resolved: That Congress should establish uniform regulations to control criminal investigation procedures.

Through research and practice debates, members sought to develop their powers of reasoning, adaptability, and delivery. These skills enabled DSF participants to compete successfully in tournaments in Virginia, Maryland, and North Carolina.

The big event of the year was an invitation to the Cherry Blossom Tournament held annually at Georgetown University, Washington, D.C., to honor debaters from all over the country.

Historian abandons room 100 to make way for new addition

Frantic photographers and Historian staff members scurried over polished floors to prepare the gym for group-picture day. Arranging unwieldy students proved exhausting for the young journalists. The lunch interval produced a welcome relief.

Bright flourescent lights often burned late into the night as writers struggled to meet tight deadlines. Composing copy and captions, cropping pictures, and adjusting layouts kept editors and their assistants busy.

The destruction of room 100 to make room for the new building compelled the transfer of annual materials to the dungeon. Members frequented the dingy underground vault near the cafeteria in search of needed items.

Persuasive business staff members secured advertisements from local concerns. The group also collected money for publications and distributed yearbooks to eager Rebels.

Conventioneers attend SIPA, CSPA

Hotdogs or other sandwiches from the drugstore often nourished Commentator editors, reporters, and feature writers as deadlines approached. Staff members struggled to fit copy, arrange news articles, and correct galleys.

Training prospective journalists for newspaper work, the Cub Club prepared the Cubboard, a regular column dealing with sophomore activities.

Boarding trains headed for New York City, nine seniors anticipated five days of business and pleasure. Representatives attended the annual CSPA convention.

In April, two juniors also traveled to Lexington for the SIPA convention.

Educator staff publishes biannual magazine, vies at Lexington

Wrinkled brows denoted intervals of thought and evaluation while Educator staff members considered each submitted article. After personal deliberation, the group discussed and selected poems, essays, short stories, and other literature for use in the magazine.

As the year progressed, late-working janitors often found the young journalists and their advisers revising and editing the materials chosen for their biannual publication.

Working with the Apprentice Club, senior editors acquainted sophomores with the techniques of producing an outstanding magazine. The meetings also offered discussions on new trends in layout and literature.

Future teachers become tutors, send Christmas joy to Vietnam

Baby dolls, toy trucks, and ghost stories amused children at Ridge Elementary School. Members of the FTA babysat for the youngsters while their parents attended PTA meetings.

Room 111 looked more like a rummage barn than a classroom as the group frantically collected paperback books, candy, foot powder, and other articles for DSF alumni stationed in Vietnam and Europe. Rebel contributions furnished the necessary items.

Throughout the year, the club sponsored a tutoring service for children unable to attend school.

During Teacher Appreciation Week, red apples and an informal tea honored faculty members.

Anne Edmond cheerfully surrenders to Carolyn Owen a box of articles collected for servicemen. The FTA packed the boxes and shipped them to Vietnam and European countries.

Chaotic clamors yielded to silence during the immediate interval preceding a speaker's delivery. After the reading, members of the Forensics Workshop offered constructive criticism on his manner of presentation and diction.

Sponsored by Mrs. Mildred Culpeper, the group met every Wednesday and Thursday afternoon to perform and to discuss new techniques. Specific points of emphasis included gestures, voice inflections, eye contact, and articulation.

Selected in February, representatives in boys' and girls' prose and poetry reading and public speaking entered the district competition at RPI. Rebel winners later participated in the state contest at the University of Virginia where Vivian Stephenson took a second in girls' poetry reading.

"This is the forest primeval." Forensics member Betty Burnette delivers the passage of "Evangeline" in practice for the district contest.

Business students enjoy suggestions from professional secretaries

"What makes a good secretary?" Blue Cross-Blue Shield representative Mr. John Wilhelm explained his criteria for selecting an efficient secretary. Barbara Collier, class of 1967, also shared her Federal Reserve Bank experiences.

Members of Phi Beta Lamda, an RPI business organization, familiarized the group with business courses in college.

Providing gifts, refreshments, and Santa Claus, the club sponsored a Christmas party for the children at the Bainbridge Baptist Center.

Representatives attended the national convention in Washington, D. C.

Rearranging an FBLA bulletin board, member Susan Huckstep outlines the advantages of a business career.

FHA creates hit with candied fruit during bake sale

Bubbles erupted from the thick vermillion syrup as it glazed freshly skewered apples. In the fall, FHA members prepared candied fruit for a school bake sale.

Packaging toys, clothing, and a complete Christmas dinner, the group brightened the holidays for a needy family of nine.

In March the Douglas Freeman chapter hosted the Henrico Federation dinner. A series of conferences and an installation of county officers followed the evening meal.

Speakers for the year included Miss Hazel D. Wilhoite, the assistant state supervisor in home economics education, and Mrs. Jo Atkinson, a home economist from VEPCO.

A Mother-Daughter banquet for the induction of new officers complemented the year's activities.

Art Service designs helium-filled balloon for Homecoming

Polka-dotted beings sauntered around the cluttered stage of the auditorium, avoiding out-stretched trees and walls. As members of the Art Service Club, they forfeited many afternoons to construct the necessary settings for "Time Out for Ginger."

Surrounded by crepe paper, masking tape, and scissors, the group designed a large observation balloon. This unusual creation represented the ASC in the Harvest Festival parade.

During April and May, the young artists painted flats for the spring musical, "My Fair Lady."

Recruits. During a regular Art Service Club meeting, Bill Powers asks for volunteers to design sets for "My Fair Lady."

NHS dusts awards, Quill and Scroll honors journalists

Spurts of water, thickened by tiny spheres of soapsuds, trickled down the panes. Dirt and grime clung to the dripping sponges of National Honor Society members as they scoured the DSF trophy cases. After dusting the awards, the group rearranged them in the cabinets.

Candles symbolizing Leadership, Character, Service, and Scholarship flickered on the stage while newly-tapped seniors promised to uphold the high standards of the NHS. Later in the year, a similar ceremony recognized outstanding juniors.

Publication staffs congregated in the auditorium for Quill and Scroll tappings. Speeches on journalistic work offered a better insight into the demands of the literary field.

After an induction, each society conducted a reception for its new members and their parents.

Solemn-faced Honor Society members ponder Christina Ulmer's speech during the junior tapping as the candle of knowledge glows.

Math society offers tutoring service, donates plaque

Arabesque designs intrigued members of the Math National Honor Society at their Christmas banquet. Devised by Mrs. Isabelle Rucker, head of the state math department, these patterns decorated seasonal cards and provided a challenge for the receiver.

To boost its treasury, the group operated a tutoring service. Students who needed assistance in math applied for it through Mrs. June Dickens or Miss Joanna Barnes, the club's advisers.

In May the society donated a plaque to the school, inscribed with the names of the charter members of NMHS. Each year the name of the most outstanding math student will augment the list.

Profitable? NMHS members Jim Triemplar and Joe Rapisarda organize plans for a tutoring service. Proceeds will finance a plaque honoring charter members.

NATIONAL MATHEMATICS HONOR SOCIETY. Troupe 2486 camps at Pleasant Grove; presents 'My Fair Lady,' one-acts

"Quiet on stage, please!"

This command silenced members of the National Thespian Society during their rehearsals. Performing for the Christmas assembly, the club depicted holiday activities in Pleasant Grove.

At meetings the troupe practiced poise, self control, projection, and articulation. Analyses of dramatic techniques also contributed to the skill of the young actors.

In the spring, the group, Troupe 2486, helped sponsor the Night of One-Acts and the musical, "My Fair Lady."

An April workshop offered theatrical instruction to interested Rebels.

Hands folded in disgust, Ginger Carol (Connie Ryan) listens patiently to a family discussion on disadvantages of her playing football. A young lady evolves from a tomboy in the senior play, "Time Out For Ginger."

DSF scientists keep vigil at weather station, visit computer center

Biting wind and lashing rain thwarted neither postmen nor Science Club members in performing their appointed duties. Daily checks upon the group's weather station located on the hill kept members posted on the ever-changing environmental conditions.

Concerned with the increasing problems of smog in the cities, the organization invited a representative from the Richmond Air Pollution Control Board to express his views on the subject.

Field trips included tours of the U.S. Weather Bureau, Medical College of Virginia and the Electronic Computer Programming Institute.

The annual Science Fair climaxed a year of hard work and intensive study with awards for excellence in each field of science.

CYL creates hushed atmosphere amid early morning clamor

Gossiping in the halls filled the early morning interval before school for most Freemanites, but amid this bustle members of the Christian Youth League quietly conducted their meetings in the Home Economics room.

Offering an opportunity for daily worship and a chance to learn of other religions, short periods of devotion consisted of Bible passages, discussions, and prayers presented by alternating members. Speakers addressed the club on the last days before the Thanksgiving and Christmas holidays.

To further increase the members' knowledge of the role religion assumed in the community, the group visited the Foreign Missions Board.

Count your blessings paraphrases Mr. William Hewlett's Thanksgiving message to the CYL, gathered in the Home Ec. room for a morning devotion.

Chessmen acquire new battle plans, strategy each Monday afternoon

War! The white knight captured the black king's rook, leaving His Majesty unprotected. The next move effected the finish—checkmate!

Every Monday afternoon, participants of the Douglas Freeman Chess Club assembled in the main cafeteria to practice their skills. Games between the members also introduced new methods of defense and attack.

Under the supervision of Mr. Walter Gladding, the organization offered membership to any interested student. Competing in inter-school chess tournaments, Rebel players matched wits and talents with representatives from Hermitage, JM, and other area schools.

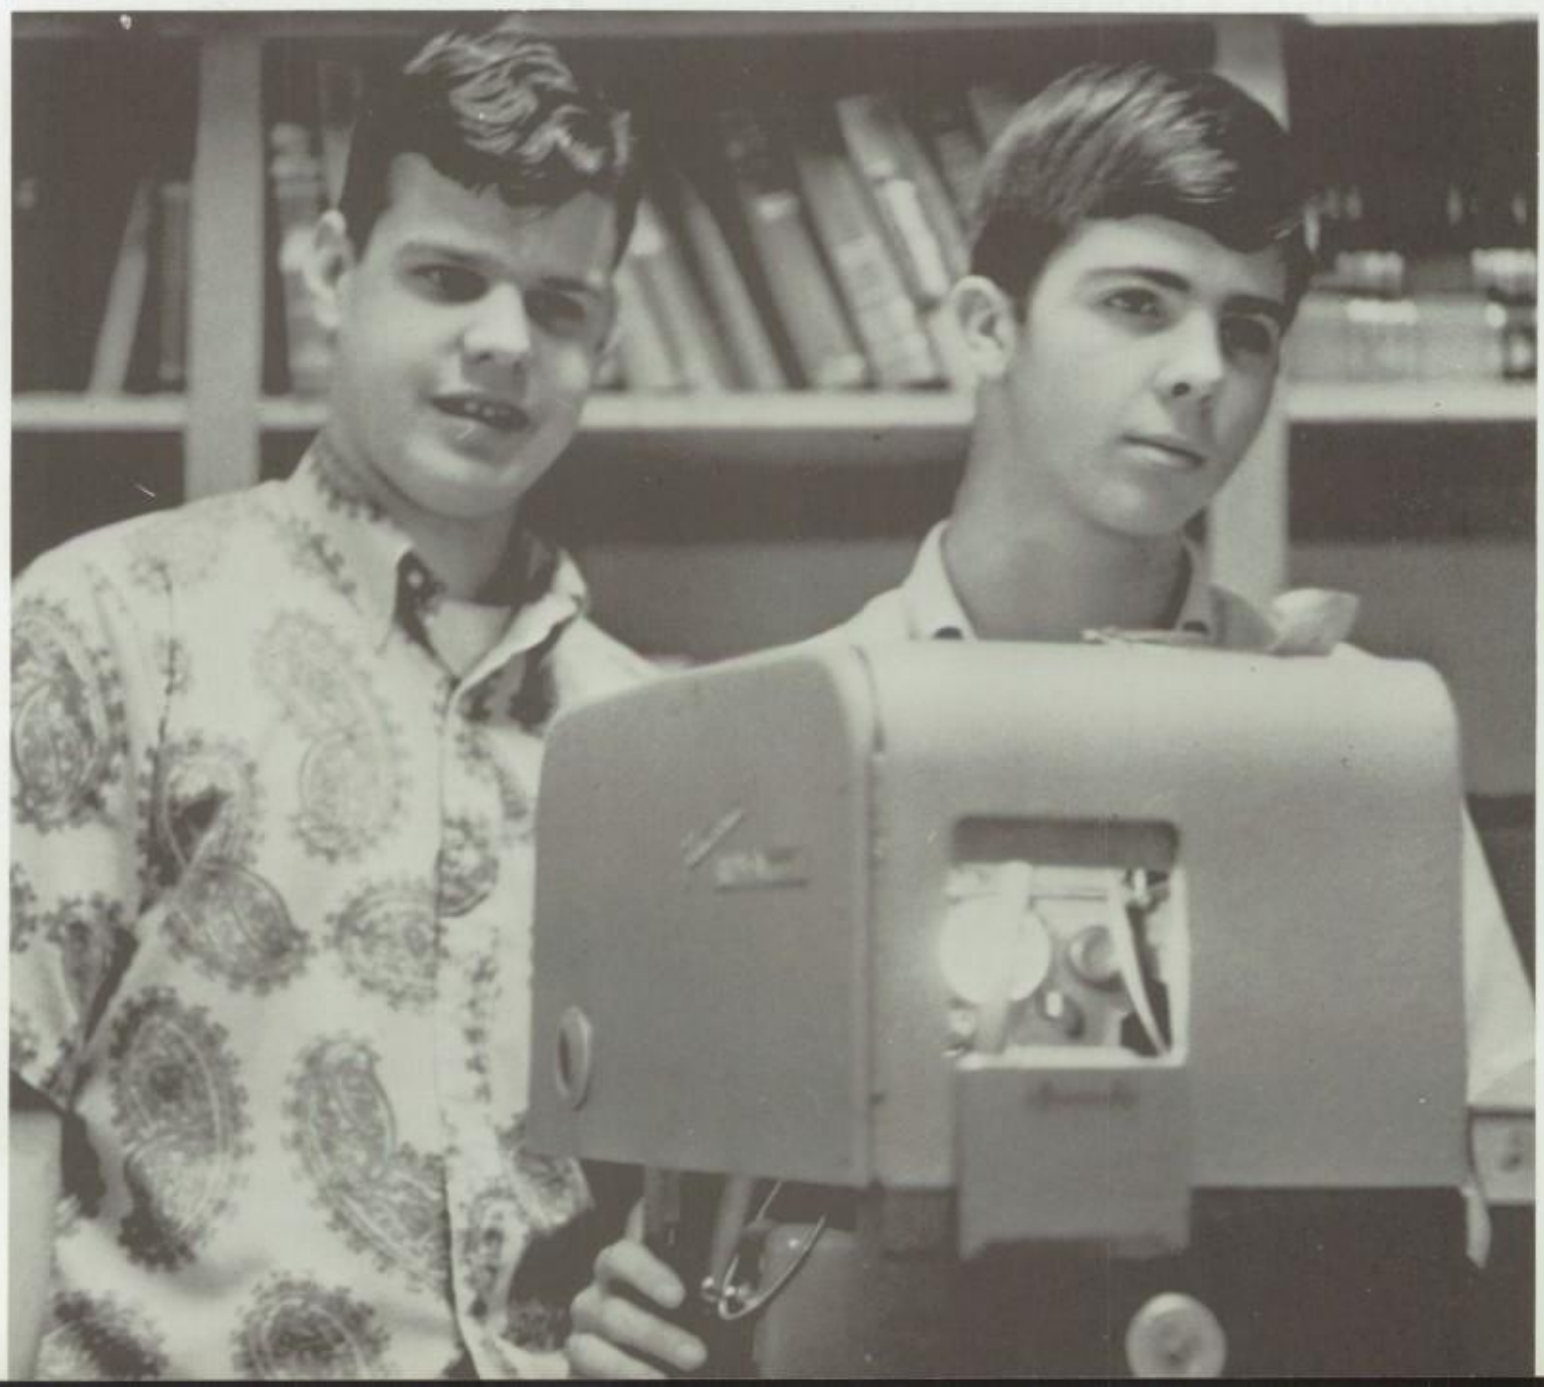
WCVE educational television welcomes Audio-Visual group

Tempting aromas lured hungry Rebels to doughnut sales held every other Wednesday afternoon. The Audio-Visual Club conducted this project to increase its treasury.

Forfeiting their study periods to assist teachers, the boys supervised the showings of movies, film strips, and slides in the classrooms.

During the year, the group visited the WLEE radio station and the WCVE educational television studio.



Bob Walters, (right) Audio-Visual Club member, instructs an eager novice Bob King in the basics of a projector.

Detoured. While clearing shelves in the magazine room, Linda Droste and Karen North pause to thumb through a Life magazine. Members spend their study halls working in and about the library.

Librarians inform group of library systems in other countries

Felt pin-ups illustrated one of several narratives presented to the Library Club. Mrs. Katherine Munt, librarian of Longden Elementary School, spoke to the group on the art of story-telling.

Discussions on the library systems in foreign countries familiarized the group with the different structures and managements. The members invited Mrs. Glennis Murphy, a native of Great Britain, to relate her observations on the newest English methods.

Representatives from area schools also addressed the club and offered their experiences.

Red Cross members cheer soldiers, orphans with goodies

Paper hats, decorative menus, and multi-colored turkeys on dinner trays greeted patients at the McGuire Veterans Hospital on Thanksgiving Day. With the assistance of adviser Mrs. Margaret McNeal, the Junior Red Cross designed and constructed favors to cheer the sick.

Clothing and Christmas stockings bulging with toys and candy filled packages which the members shipped to Vietnamese orphans. Soldiers stationed there received goodie boxes containing candy, cookies, and gum.

Later in the year, county coordinator Mrs. Elaine Stroermer demonstrated various methods of artificial respiration.

Moving a stretcher, Red Cross President Rita Stanley attempts to straighten the clinic for a club meeting. Members will then assemble tray favors for patients at McGuire Veterans Hospital.

Santa Claus' arrival brightens faces of underprivileged children

Pillow-stuffed trousers and a flowing white beard announced the arrival of Santa Claus to the little "brothers and sisters" of the Medical Arts Club. At the Christmas party, these children from the William Byrd Community Center received refreshments and gifts.

Programs included speakers on occupational therapy and nursing.

Y-Teens I purchases new flagpole, dines on foreign specialties

Flagpole shopping appealed to Y-Teens I as members joined with the other triangles at Douglas Freeman to purchase a pole for the football field.

Supporting Ng Pui San, a young Korean girl, the organization contributed $20 a month for her care. A frequent exchange of letters maintained a warm correspondence and a mutual friendship.

Dining on a variety of foreign foods, the club held their traditional Around the World Banquet. Dishes ranged from Chicken Chow Mein to Danish pastries and Yorkshire pudding.

The girls also purchased honor code cards for the SCA.

Triangle II sews toy kittens for gifts

Button-eyed felines inspired friendships between Y-Teens Triangle II and the girls of the Janey Porter Barrett Home. The club members stitched and stuffed the kittens which they presented to the group.

At the request of the Triangle both the Downbeats and the DSF majorettes performed at the home. Refreshments complemented each visit.

Gifts of the club, brightly-colored Christmas packages arrived at the Grace House to the delight of many eager youngsters. The holidays also included caroling at the Westbrook Hospital.

Hoping to assist medical research, the organization collected money for the fight against muscular dystrophy.

Programs ranged from speakers on make-up application and social work to a demonstration of karate.

In May the group conducted an end-of-the year dinner.

"Five cents a brownie," chant Triangle II members as they sell baked goods to hungry students in the main hall after school.

Triangle III 'travels' to Japan, adopts little sisters

Octopus, seaweed, and other such delicacies constituted a typical breakfast for Nancy Pace, a teacher at Collegiate, during her stay in Japan. Dressed in a blue and white silk kimono, the instructor spoke to Y-Teens Triangle III on her summer trip abroad.

Acting through the William Byrd Community Center, each member "adopted" a little sister. Outings included movies, shopping sprees, and picnics in the park.

During the year, the girls operated the paperback book store and the coat check at basketball games and proms.

At the club's invitation, Susie Wenckus, Miss Teenage Richmond, told of her experiences in the Miss Teenage America Pageant in Dallas, Texas.

Y-Teens members serve as aides; investigate LSD, marijuana

"Water! Water!" Serving as nurses' aides at McGuire Veterans Hospital, Y-Teens Triangle IV members filled water pitchers, changed bed linens, and performed other such tasks for the hospital patients.

With earnings form the sale of light bulbs, the girls purchased a Rebel Flag for DSF.

Programs consisted of discussions on drugs and alcoholics, soldiers in Vietnam, and schools for the deaf. Douglas Freeman's foreign exchange student Ann Dimanno spoke on life and customs in the Phillipines.

Boys wage war against grime; scrub, scour halls, rooms at school

Scraping and scouring paint from the hallways, trophy cases, and the gym floor, the Key Club labored to repair the deeds of thoughtless vandals. Painting the gym bleachers completed their tasks.

At Christmas time, the group caroled at the Westbrook Sanitarium.

With trash bags in hand, the boys often searched the DSF campus for scattered bits of paper. The campaign against dirt continued inside the classrooms with the scrubbing of desks and dusty blackboards.

Attending the district convention in Baltimore, DSF representatives exchanged ideas with Key Clubbers from Virginia, Maryland, and Delaware.

Clean-up. Key Clubbers Steve Jones and Richard Knapp collect trash accumulated the preceding week.

Hi-Y sells sweaters, sports programs, cards to students

Garbed in blue athletic sweaters or jackets, the members of the Hi-Y gathered at the far end of the gymnasium every Friday during the fall to enjoy the pep rallies.

Throughout the football season, the organization profited from the sale of sports programs at each home game.

In November, the group distributed a list of welfare families to the homerooms. Rebels, in turn, prepared large decorated boxes of food, and presented them to the boys during the annual Thanksgiving assembly. Mr. Rudy Potter, assistant pastor at River Road Baptist Church, spoke on the physical and spiritual maturity in today's youth.

School-spirited Freemanites were able to obtain from each member V-neck sweaters bearing the initials DSF. The club also furnished VISA cards to any interested purchaser.

Apprehensive as to the outcome of the Thanksgiving Assembly, Mr. Satterfield, Hi-Y co-ordinator, waits for the curtain to rise.

"FCA! What's that?"

Initiating such questions, the Fellowship of Christian Athletes acquired club status this year. The new organization welcomed boys participating in any area of sports.

During each meeting, the members separated into "huddle groups" where they discussed current issues and events in the world of sports.

In April, the FCA conducted a sports clinic for interested Rebs.

Giant wooden timepiece sounding hour rotates in DSF parade

Living figurines marched from the giant wooden clock to announce the hour. At the harvest festival parade, the German Club entered the old timepiece for its float.

At the group's invitation, Henriette Salkman, John Marshall's foreign exchange student from Sweden, expounded on her first impressions of Richmond and the way of life in her country. Later in the year, Barbara Holm, St. Catherine's AFS student from Germany, spoke on the German school system.

With earnings from bakesales, the organization purchased a subscription to Bunte magazine for the library. Inspiring good will, the members also contributed to an Austrian children's home.

Representatives competed in the National German Contest, a language tournament for high school students.

Relating experiences at her home in the Philippines, AFS student Ann Dimaano pauses in her talk to the German Club: Ann made many such speeches to other groups.

Immortals mingle at Latin banquet; olive-rolling entertains slaves

Psychedelic, striped, and flowery wrapping paper concealed grab-bag items from curious Rebels. The Latin Club conducted its annual Trojan Horse sale in February to raise money for their future projects.

Athena, Venus, and other immortals mingled with the Romans and the servants at the club's traditional slave auction held in the cafeteria. After competing in olive-rolling contests, thralls served their masters' dinner.

During the year, the members viewed and briefly discussed slides of Italian landscapes and architecture.

French students sing foreign carols in assembly, plan French night

Tears glistened in the eyes of Mrs. Pauline Robertson and other tourists when their guide expressed his sincere regrets for the strained relations between the United States and France.

At one of its monthly meetings, the adviser of the Le Cercle Francais shared a tape of this speech and slides of her European trip with the club.

At Christmas time the group gathered in the auditorium to sing French carols.

In the spring French Night afforded members an opportunity to display their designing and acting talents.

Spanish Club designs Expo '68 exhibit, sells cucuruchas to Rebs

"Cascabeles, cascabeles, reyes cascabeles" echoed through the main cafeteria as the Spanish Club sang its version of "Jingle Bells" at the annual Christmas party.

Afterwards the group suspended a paper mache Santa Claus from the ceiling. Submitting to the whacks of eager members, the festive piñata burst spilling enough candy for all.

Fernando Riviera, a native of Colombia, spoke to the group on the life and customs of his people.

Curious and excited Rebels hurried from seventh period classes to the cucuruchas sale in the hall. These Spanish delights consisted of closed paper funnels stuffed with popcorn, candy and cookies.

The Club also prepared its own Expo '68, an exhibit of Spanish Lit.

IRC debates foreign policies, views film on Communism

"Okay, who's got my rake?"

Exhausted International Relations Club members frantically searched for their tools as the end of a very profitable work day approached. Members agreed to rake leaves and wash cars on Saturday to help boost the club funds.

During weekly seminars members conducted debates on foreign policies and world problems.

Commemorating the fiftieth anniversary of the Bolshevik Revolution, the group viewed a movie on Communism.

A trip to Washington and a spring banquet climaxed the year.

Language societies design caroling books, award scholarship

Wisps of hot steam drifted from an uncovered casserole tempting members of the Spanish National Honor Society. Once a month the club gathered for a delicious covered dish supper, and after-dinner business meetings furthered the discussion of future plans.

At Christmas time, the group decorated greeting cards and presented one to each Spanish teacher.

In the spring, the SNHS awarded a scholarship to the most outstanding senior in the organization.

Employing staplers, magic markers, construction paper, and music sheets, the French National Honor Society designed attractive songbooks filled with traditional Christmas carols. The group presented the completed edition to the "Le Cercle Francais" for use during their seasonal program.

Optimist breakfast, DAR assembly hear Downbeats sing

Poised upon the sinuous staircase of the Valentine Museum, the Downbeats presented a Christmas concert of traditional carols. The melodic echoes greeted seasonal visitors.

Rising at dawn, anxious singers rushed to the Executive Motel for a 7:30 appointment. There the girls entertained at the Optimists Club breakfast.

Stunt-Talent Night afforded the club an opportunity to sing at DSF.

Throughout the year the group also performed for the Carillon Woman's Club, the Janey Barrett Home, Reynolds Metals, and the DAR Convention.

Rebel majorettes open Interstate 64, place in State

Mop-headed ragdolls pranced across the stage amid flashing lights and the resounding music of the Jades. Costumed twirlers presented an original routine for Stunt-Talent Night.

A drum roll, a kick, and a ribbon-cutting ceremony preceded the girls' march down Interstate 64 when the highway first opened to traffic last fall.

For their performance in the State Baton Twirling Contest, Rebel majorettes secured a second-place rating.

Band hosts Spring Music Festival, sends eleven to All-Regional

Breaking the stillness of early morning each Friday, band members rushed into the silent halls of Douglas Freeman in preparation for the morning pep rallies.

Throughout the year, the band boosted Rebels' spirits by playing "Dixie" more than 200 times.

Travelling to the University of Virginia in October, the organization attended "Band Day," a statewide event where bands assemble during half time to present a show.

For the first time in DSF history, the group hosted the District Musical Festival. Bands from around the area were judged on their performances in this annual program held in early March. Playing two overtures and one march, the DSF band received a Superior rating.

Springtime brought band members more music to practice and additional rehearsals to attend. Participation in the "Night of Music" and "My Fair Lady" climaxed the group's musical activities for the year.

Chorus, Glee Club participate in Christmas 'March-In' at DSF

Marching through the halls of DSF on the day before Christmas vacation, the Glee Club serenaded seventh period classes with carols. They also presented a concert for second-period classes.

"The rain in Spain falls mainly on the plain." Instructing the uncouth Eliza Doolittle in the social graces, Professor Henry Higgins was determined to prepare her for a grand debut. Her metamorphosis formed the basis for DSF musical "My Fair Lady." The band, drama department, and Glee Club sponsored the May production.

In the spring representatives for All-Regional Chorus performed in concert at RPI. Selected members also attended All-State Chorus.

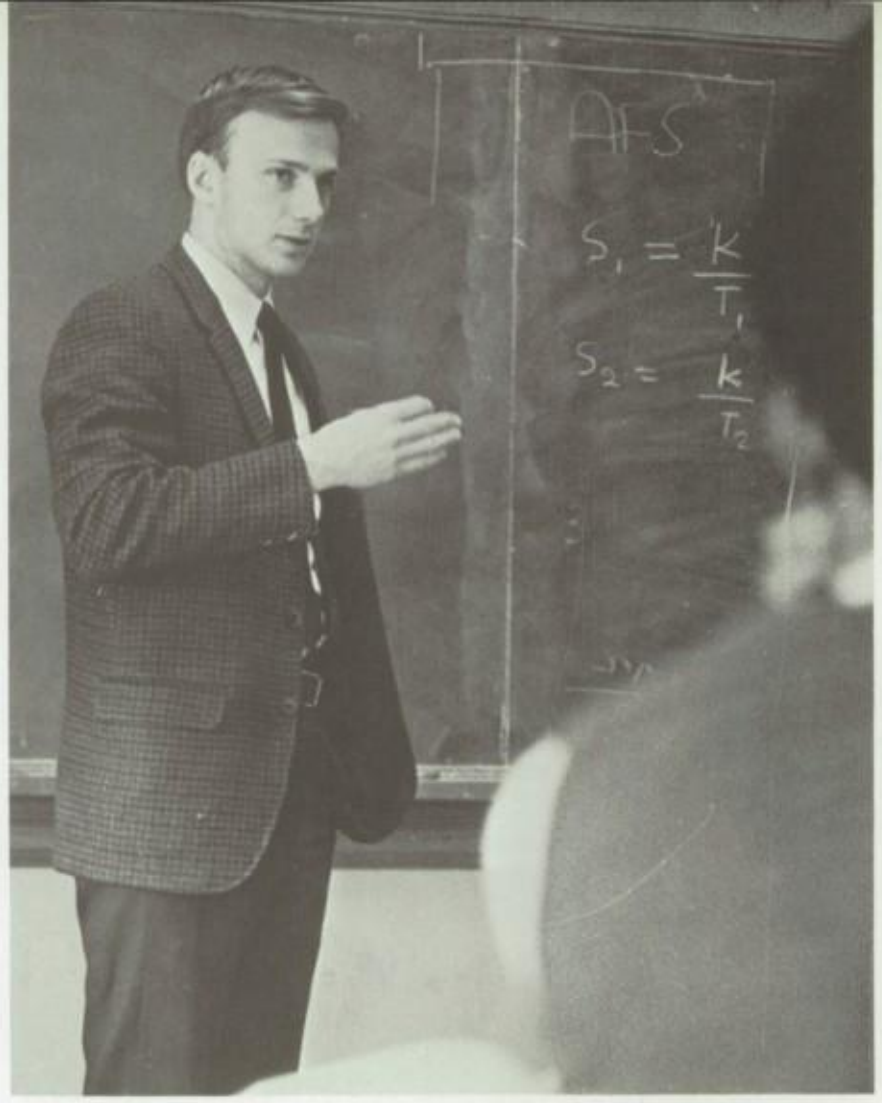
Wisdom, experience of coaches mold Rebel Sportsmen

Determination and spirit orginate with the first practices and echo through the showers after the final game. Agile wit and physical skill unite to produce the outstanding athlete. Under the instruction and inspiration of an able trainer, each team member developes his abilities to their fullest extent. Memories of defeat and disappointment linger momentarily, then vanish with a confident word from the coach. Fresh resolution kindles impetus in each player.



Unraveling complicated Algebra problems, Ronnie Jones instructs his seventh period class in inverse variation.

Joseph Lively joins Freeman's cross country staff

Bill Long served as head varsity football and assistant track coach. Aided by Joseph Lively, Ronnie Jones trained cross-country trackmen over hard-surfaced roads and rolling lawns.

Regional champion Douglas Freeman wrestlers worked ceaselessly under Ernest Venturino. Jim Sangston and John Walker coached varsity basketball, while Wayne Hoy piloted the JV team.

Advised by Miss Bonnie Hudson, girl cagers perfected basketball skills. Miss Dorothy Jordan sponsored Douglas Freeman's cheerleaders.

Wayne Hoy and John Walker managed Varsity and JV baseball.

Intent on pre-game activity, football coach Bill Long surveys the gridiron.

Careful scorekeeping requires keen observation by John Walker. Temporarily forsaking coaching for the classroom, Miss Bonnie Hudson, Joseph Lively, and Ernest Venturino attend to study halls and teach regular classes. Government class and removal of team pictures from the hall occupy Miss Dot Jordan and Jim Sangston. A lull in the Tee Jay game gives Wayne Hoy a chance for a last minute briefing. Physical education coach Ray Long umpires a softball game behind Freeman's new construction.

A hole in the Lane defensive line gives halfback Tom Chamouris a chance to put six points on the scoreboard.

DSF Rebels dry up Crimson Wave in playoff, share state title

Undefeated, Rebel gridmen rolled over Capital District opponents using a strong ground attack coupled with a healthy air offense. Freeman's defense, which held its opponents' average score to 6 points a game, greatly determined the seasons outcome of 11-0-0.

The Rebel team shared the state championship with Norfolk's Princess Anne and Arlington's Annandale. All three teams ended undefeated in their district games and regional playoffs.

Rebs faced the Crimson Wave of Petersburg for the central region. From the start, Freeman dominated the game in first downs and yardage. With only a minute left in the last quarter, Billy Lukens made a 46-yard punt return that left the ball on the five yard-line. Larry Smith rammed through the defense for the winning touchdown.

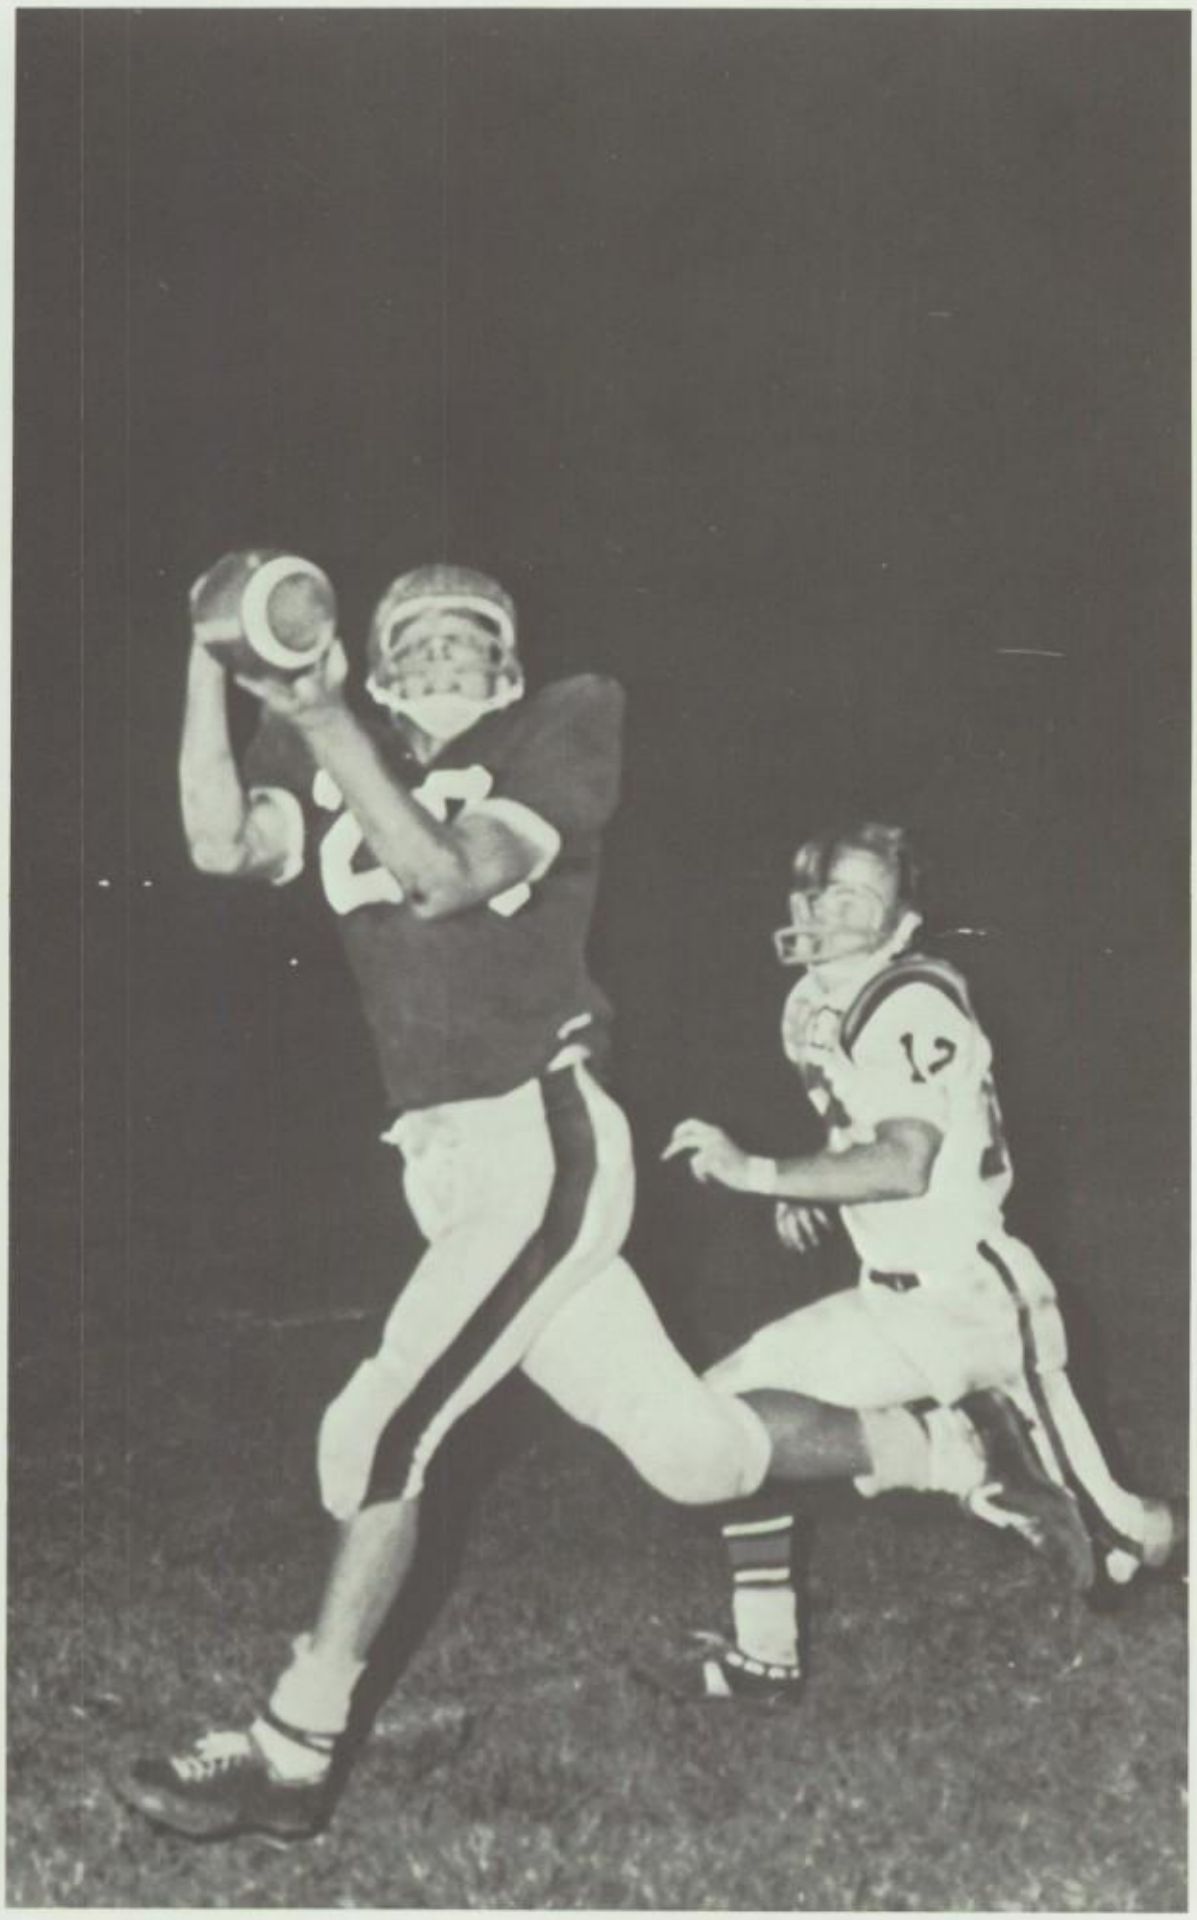
Tomlinson places on 1st group 1-A team

Watched by a crowd of 6,000, a potent Rebel offense overturned the Black Knights, who for two years straight had broken up undefeated seasons for Freeman. In a close game with Highland Springs, a cold Rebel team that ended the half with a seven point deficit, returned to win 14-7.

At the end of the season, while sharing the state crown, Freeman placed several men on the all-state and all-district teams. Scott Tomlinson was elected as an end to the state All-Group I-A first team. On the second team, back Larry Smith and tackle Robbi Vandenbrock won positions.

Five men from Freeman were elected to the All-Capital District team.



Encircled by Bulldog defenders, Billy Lukens (11) rushes to aid downed fullback Larry Smith (33).

Rebel cagers sport District's top rebounding trio

Known in the Capital District for their superb play under pressure, this year's varsity cagers rallied in four overtime games and won them all during their triumphant 14-4 season.

A well balanced team saw game-high scoring by five different regulars. Sophomore Barty Smith's addition to the starting five gave Coach Jim Sangston the District's top rebounding trio made up of Smith and seniors Charlie Earle and Dave Moxon.

Despite the four point effort by Jay Fleisher in the final ten seconds of second-round tournament play, the Rebels fell 44-43 in an upset victory by Highland Springs.

Open tournament combines Gray, Blue Leagues; Scholars win

Gophers? Turkeys? Falcons?

These names which seemingly apply to animals in a zoo rather than basketball players were included among this year's intramural teams.

Each Saturday morning from January through March, 160 boys met for 30-minute games. During the three running quarters and one stop-the-clock quarter, the teams played in games supervised and officiated by Coaches John Walker and Wayne Hoy.

After 12 weeks of regular season play, the Blue League Champion Scholars met the Gray League Champion Falcons for the championship game. The Scholars triumphed 48 to 21.

Jayvees stage rally, finish season with even ledger

Fighting a shortage of guards, Coach Wayne Hoy converted several of his forwards to front-courtmen in order to give the team additional ball control.

Despite the loss of two sophomores to the varsity, the Jayvees fielded a team with height as its best advantage.

Although the squad played numerous "second half" ball games, the first part of the year found the team on the short end of the scoreboard. After losses in six of their first seven games, the Baby Rebs rallied with determination in the "second half" ball games, the first part even 9-9 record.

University provides Rebel trying ground

Cross Country: Solitary motorists ground to a halt during the JM meet as trackmen ventured into the side street course and maintained a large 17-44 margin over the Justices, adding another win toward the completion of a 3-4 season.

A two-and-a-half mile jaunt to the University of Richmond warmed cross country runners for a six-mile course through a maze of campus buildings and asphalt walks.

Winter Track: Another episode of man's age-old struggle against winter's rain and mud unfolded every day after school from November to March as cindermen prepared for spring competition. Heaving plastic-covered shots and practicing jumps kept Rebel harriers well-oiled and in-shape for future meets.

Heavy breathing identifies the final lap of a two mile course as Rebel cindermen practice on a frigid November afternoon.

Obliquely framed by skewed bleacher supports, winter trackmen take a two lap warm-up before practicing separate events.

Sophomore girls lead Rebellettes to victorious year

Taking advantage of new sophomore talent, Miss Bonnie Hudson piloted Douglas Freeman's girl cagers to a winning 7-3 season.

Practice sessions stressed team defense. The girls used this to hold their opponents to an average of less than 30 points per game.

During the year the squad posted wins over every team in the District except Henrico.

The combination of scoring by the forwards and rebounding by the backcourtmen gave this year's cagers overall balance and proved decisive in spectacular wins over Highland Springs, Tucker, and Hermitage.

Cindermen extend streak; establish two school, two state records; gain district laurels

Spurred by a winning tradition, cindermen retained their domination over district competition for the ninth straight year.

Harrier Mike Fratkin reached a new low of 9.8 for the 100 and 22.1 for the 220. Mark Pero set a record of 1:56.9 in the 880, and Jim Shannon stretched to 22'4" in the broad jump, gaining still another laurel for Douglas Freeman High School.

Green glovers win three, baby Rebs bow once

Loss of lettermen and inexperience turned what promised to be a winning season into a 3-13 record. Victories over TJ, Varina, and JM kept spirit alive.

In contrast, the JV team had a perfect season, barring a technical loss to Varina. Led by coach John Walker, the team compiled a 6-1 record.

DSF linksmen face cold spring, score 4-2 season

Chilled but undaunted by raw spring weather, hopeful hole hoppers struggled for a position on the Freeman golf team. Under the supervision of Mr. John Briggs, Rebel golfers recorded a solid 4-2 season against district clubs.

Practicing at Meadowbrook, Rebel iron men sharpened their golfing skills in order to meet the exacting standards of interscholastic contests.

Ankle-deep water posed no problems for dedicated players. Rather than accept a 2-point penalty, ardent clubbers waded into creeks and ponds to retrieve soggy balls and save strokes.

In the opening match, seniors Lee Brown and Paul Adams topped TJ opponents 2-1 in single competition. Teaming sophomore Jody White with junior Jeff Scholl added points to the already winning score, which finaled 27-0.

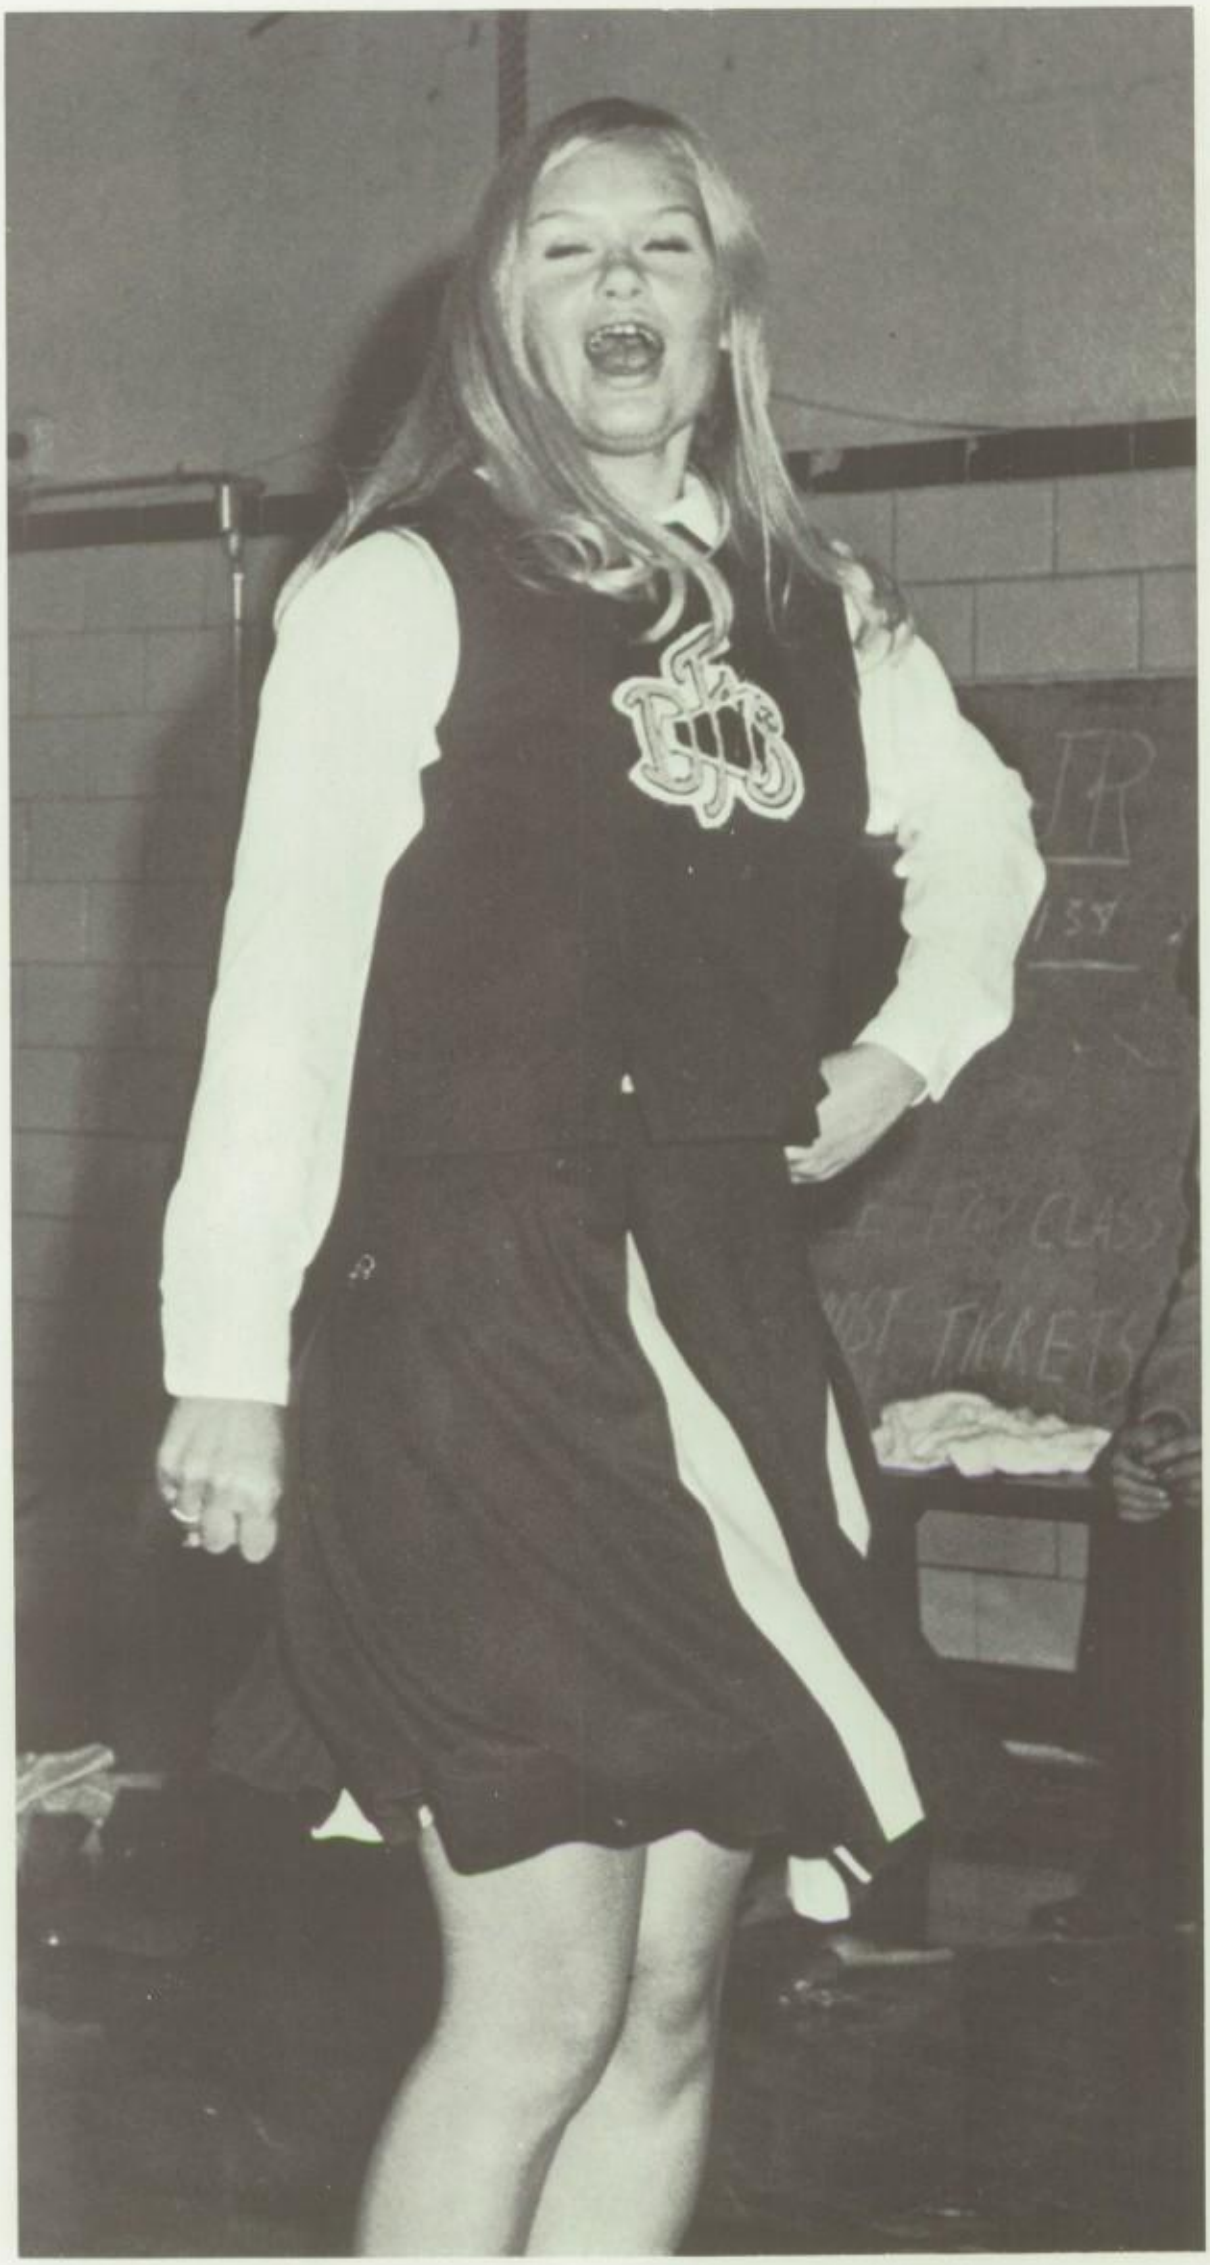
The nervous murmuring of the crowd rose to a thundering roar of enthusiasm as Rebel cheerleaders opened each Friday night game.

In addition to leading cheers at varsity games, the girls served at December's awards banquet.

Poised before banks of Douglas Freeman fans, Rebel rousers scored second place in Group I-A at Thalhimers 37th annual cheer rally at the Arena.

The year's first pep rally presented an opportunity to show off newly-designed uniforms. Straying from standard designs, Rebelettes adopted an outfit reminiscent of Civil War veterans.

After the final pep rally, senior cheerleaders customarily prepared to douse juniors in the locker room showers. Tradition was reversed, however, when juniors turned on seniors, and six wet girls emerged from locker room.



Taunting an imaginary foe, senior Barbara Winstead proclaims her repugnance of John Marshall rivals.

Wind-tossed hair crowns varsity cheerleaders at the football regional playoff at Richmond's city stadium.

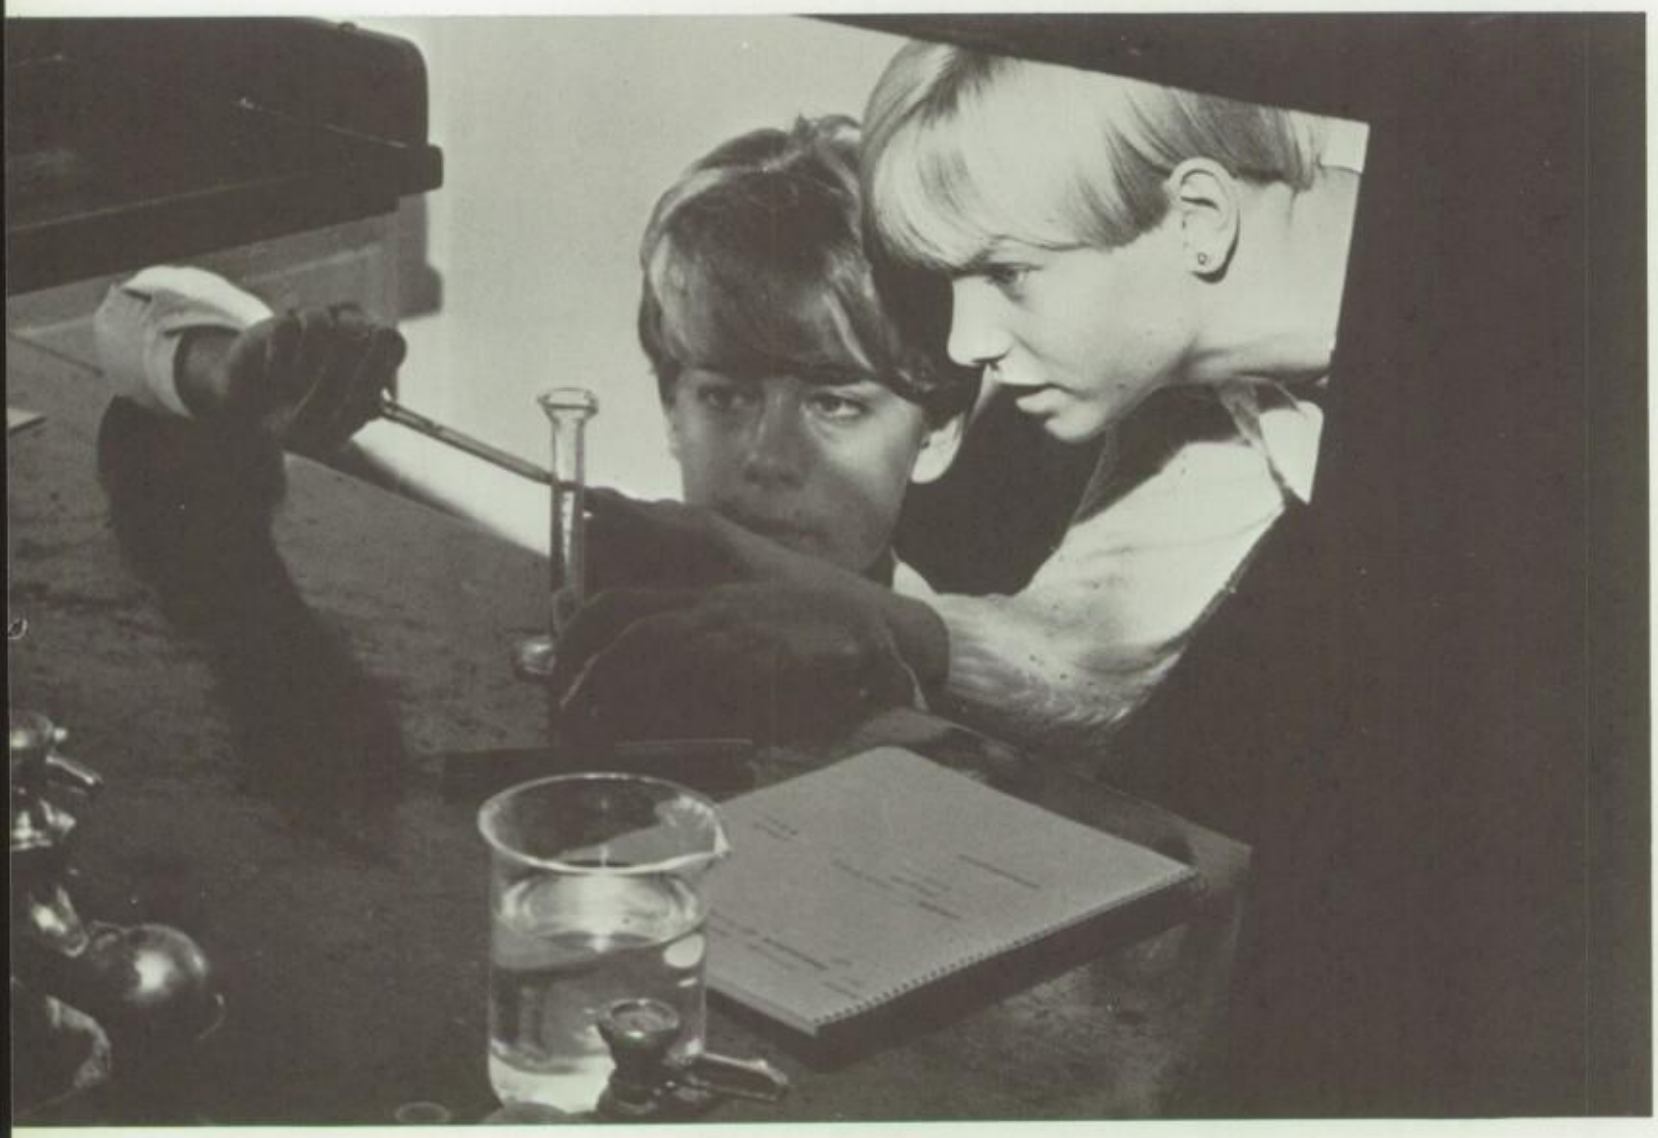
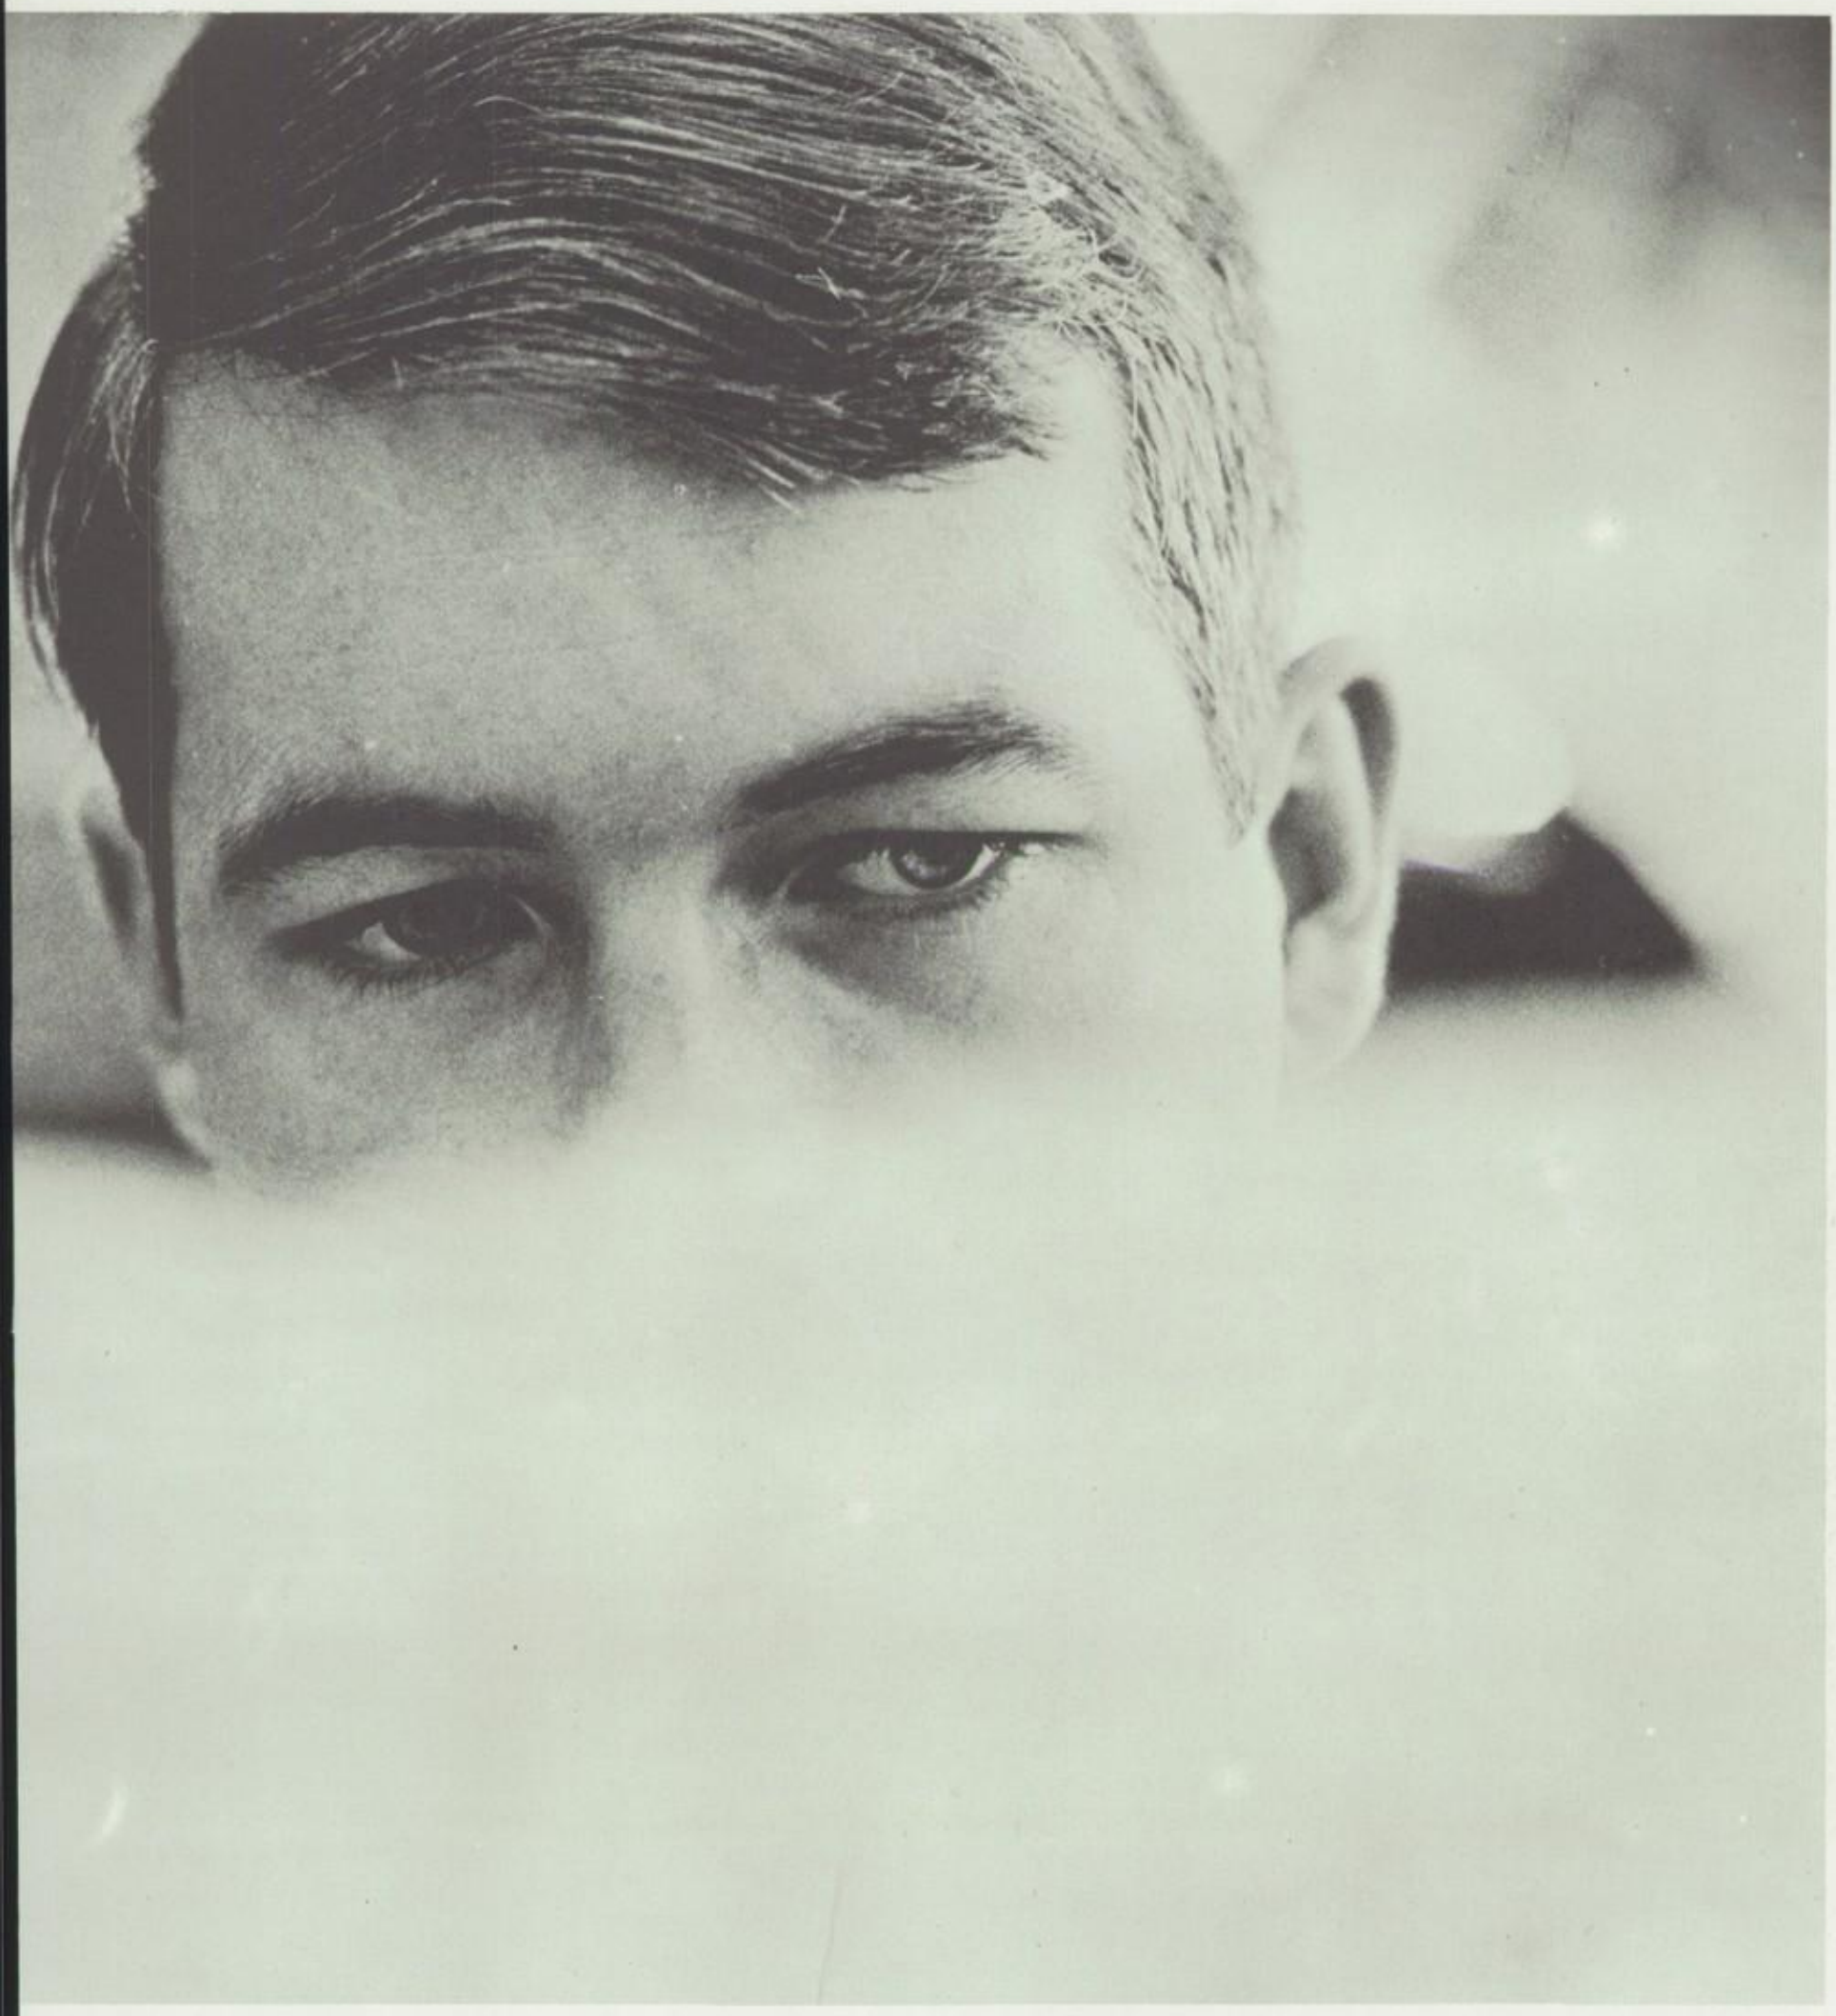
Happily involved in an after-lunch pep rally, "bar fly" Linda Reeder sits astride "good guy" Susie Fuqua's knee and awaits Black Bart.

Classroom discoveries prod new inquiries

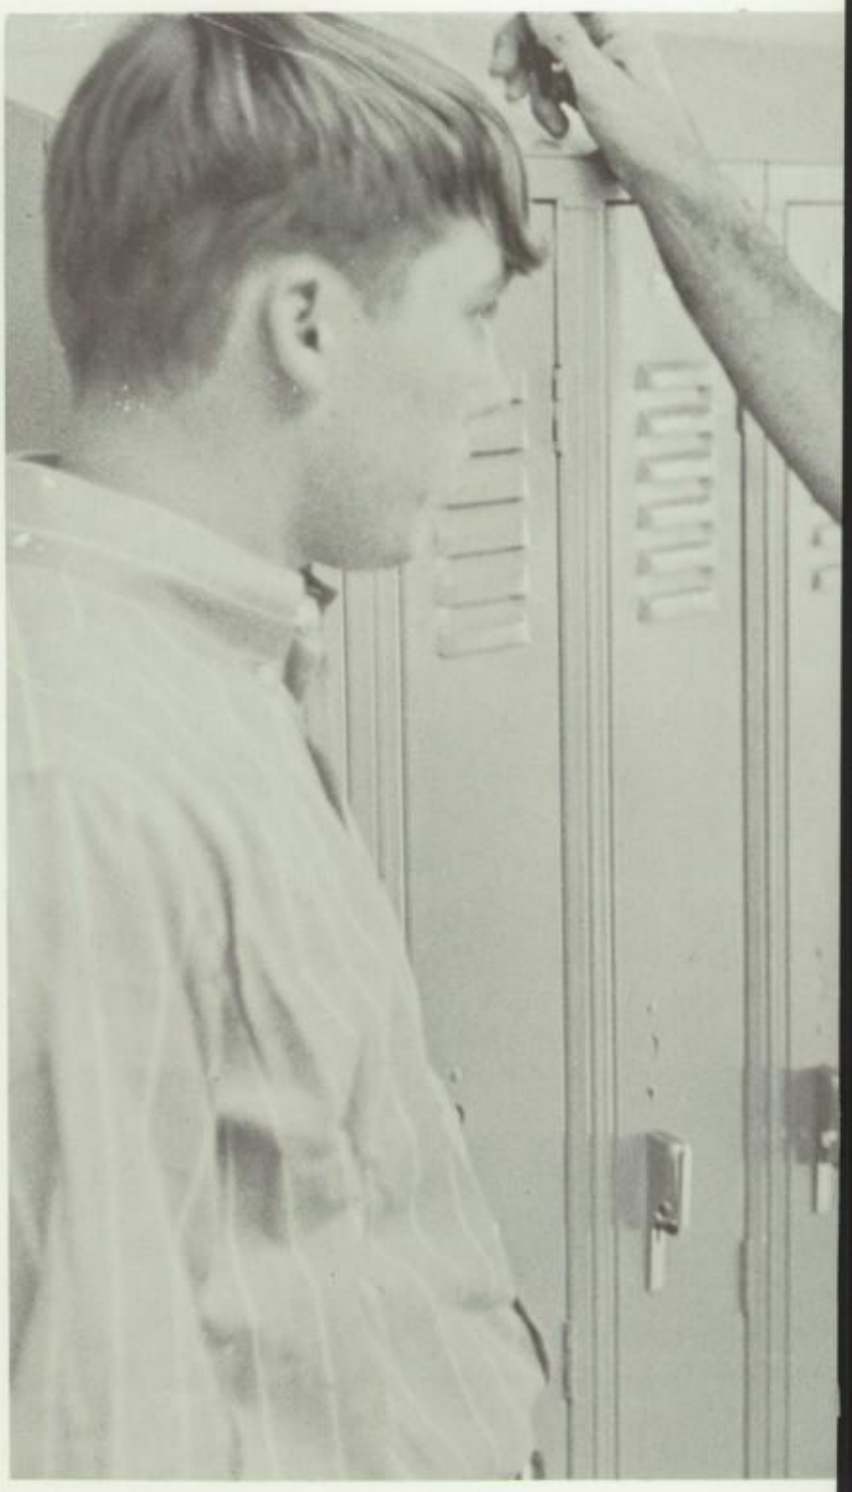




Probing for evidence of regularity, two Rebels analyze Archimedes' principle of floating bodies. Scientific investigation imposes countless experiments. Each discovery erupts from a serious pursuit of learning, and each conclusion yields another quest.

Guiding students in their academic ventures, history teacher Ron Otom projects his knowledge with words, gestures, and expressions. Through a transfer of ideas, he encourages inquiry and accomplishment. Thoughts of fellow classmates effect impressions and provide stimuli.

Hall Pass. Assistant Principal Richard Anthony questions Curtis Miller about his hall pass.



Summer solitude surrounds Assistant Principal Thomas Coleman as he assists Miss Land and Mrs. Bok in preparing assembly schedules.

Intensely concentrating on the transcripts confronting him, Principal W. Howard Mears dispenses with some of the paperwork which floods the administrative office.

Reflection. As Mr. Coleman searches through student cards in the temporary file, he pauses briefly to consider the Rebel in question.

New administrator Richard Anthony joins principals

Supervision of the janitorial staff, maintenance of the school-building, and discipline of students cutting classes were among the duties that faced Richard Anthony as he undertook the job of assistant principal for the first time. He was also responsible for the promptness and upkeep of the school buses.

Thomas Coleman, the returning assistant principal, approved students' excuses for all-day absences. He also visited classrooms in order to evaluate methods of instruction.

Principal W. Howard Mears served as chief administrator. His specific responsibilities included the supervision of personnel and students, and the scheduling of classes.

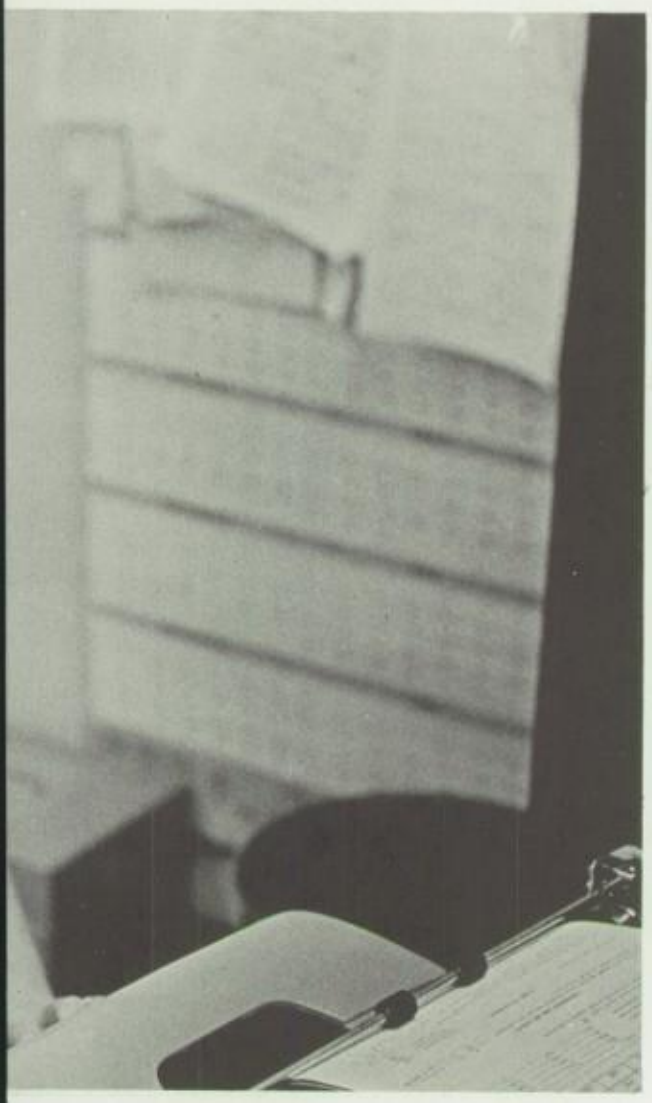
The noise and debris of construction filled the administrative office as well as the area of the building expansion. Workmen covered the walls of the three principals' offices with wood paneling. This addition fulfilled its purpose by absorbing interfering sounds, thus providing the office with a quiet atmosphere. The paneling also brightened the appearance of the conference rooms.

Coordination among the faculty, the administration, and the guidance department is exemplified by Mr. Mear's discussion of school business with guidance receptionist Mrs. Elsie Hoy.

Enrollment, course assignments, and teacher qualifications form the body of the Virginia State Department of Education report. Typing duties such as this are familiar work for Mrs. Virginia Saunders, secretary.

Piles of papers surround bookkeeper Mrs. Dorothy O'Keefe as she compiles receipts for accounting purposes.

College Boards registration forms puzzle senior Steve Esbach until Mrs. Elsie Hoy provides the data required.

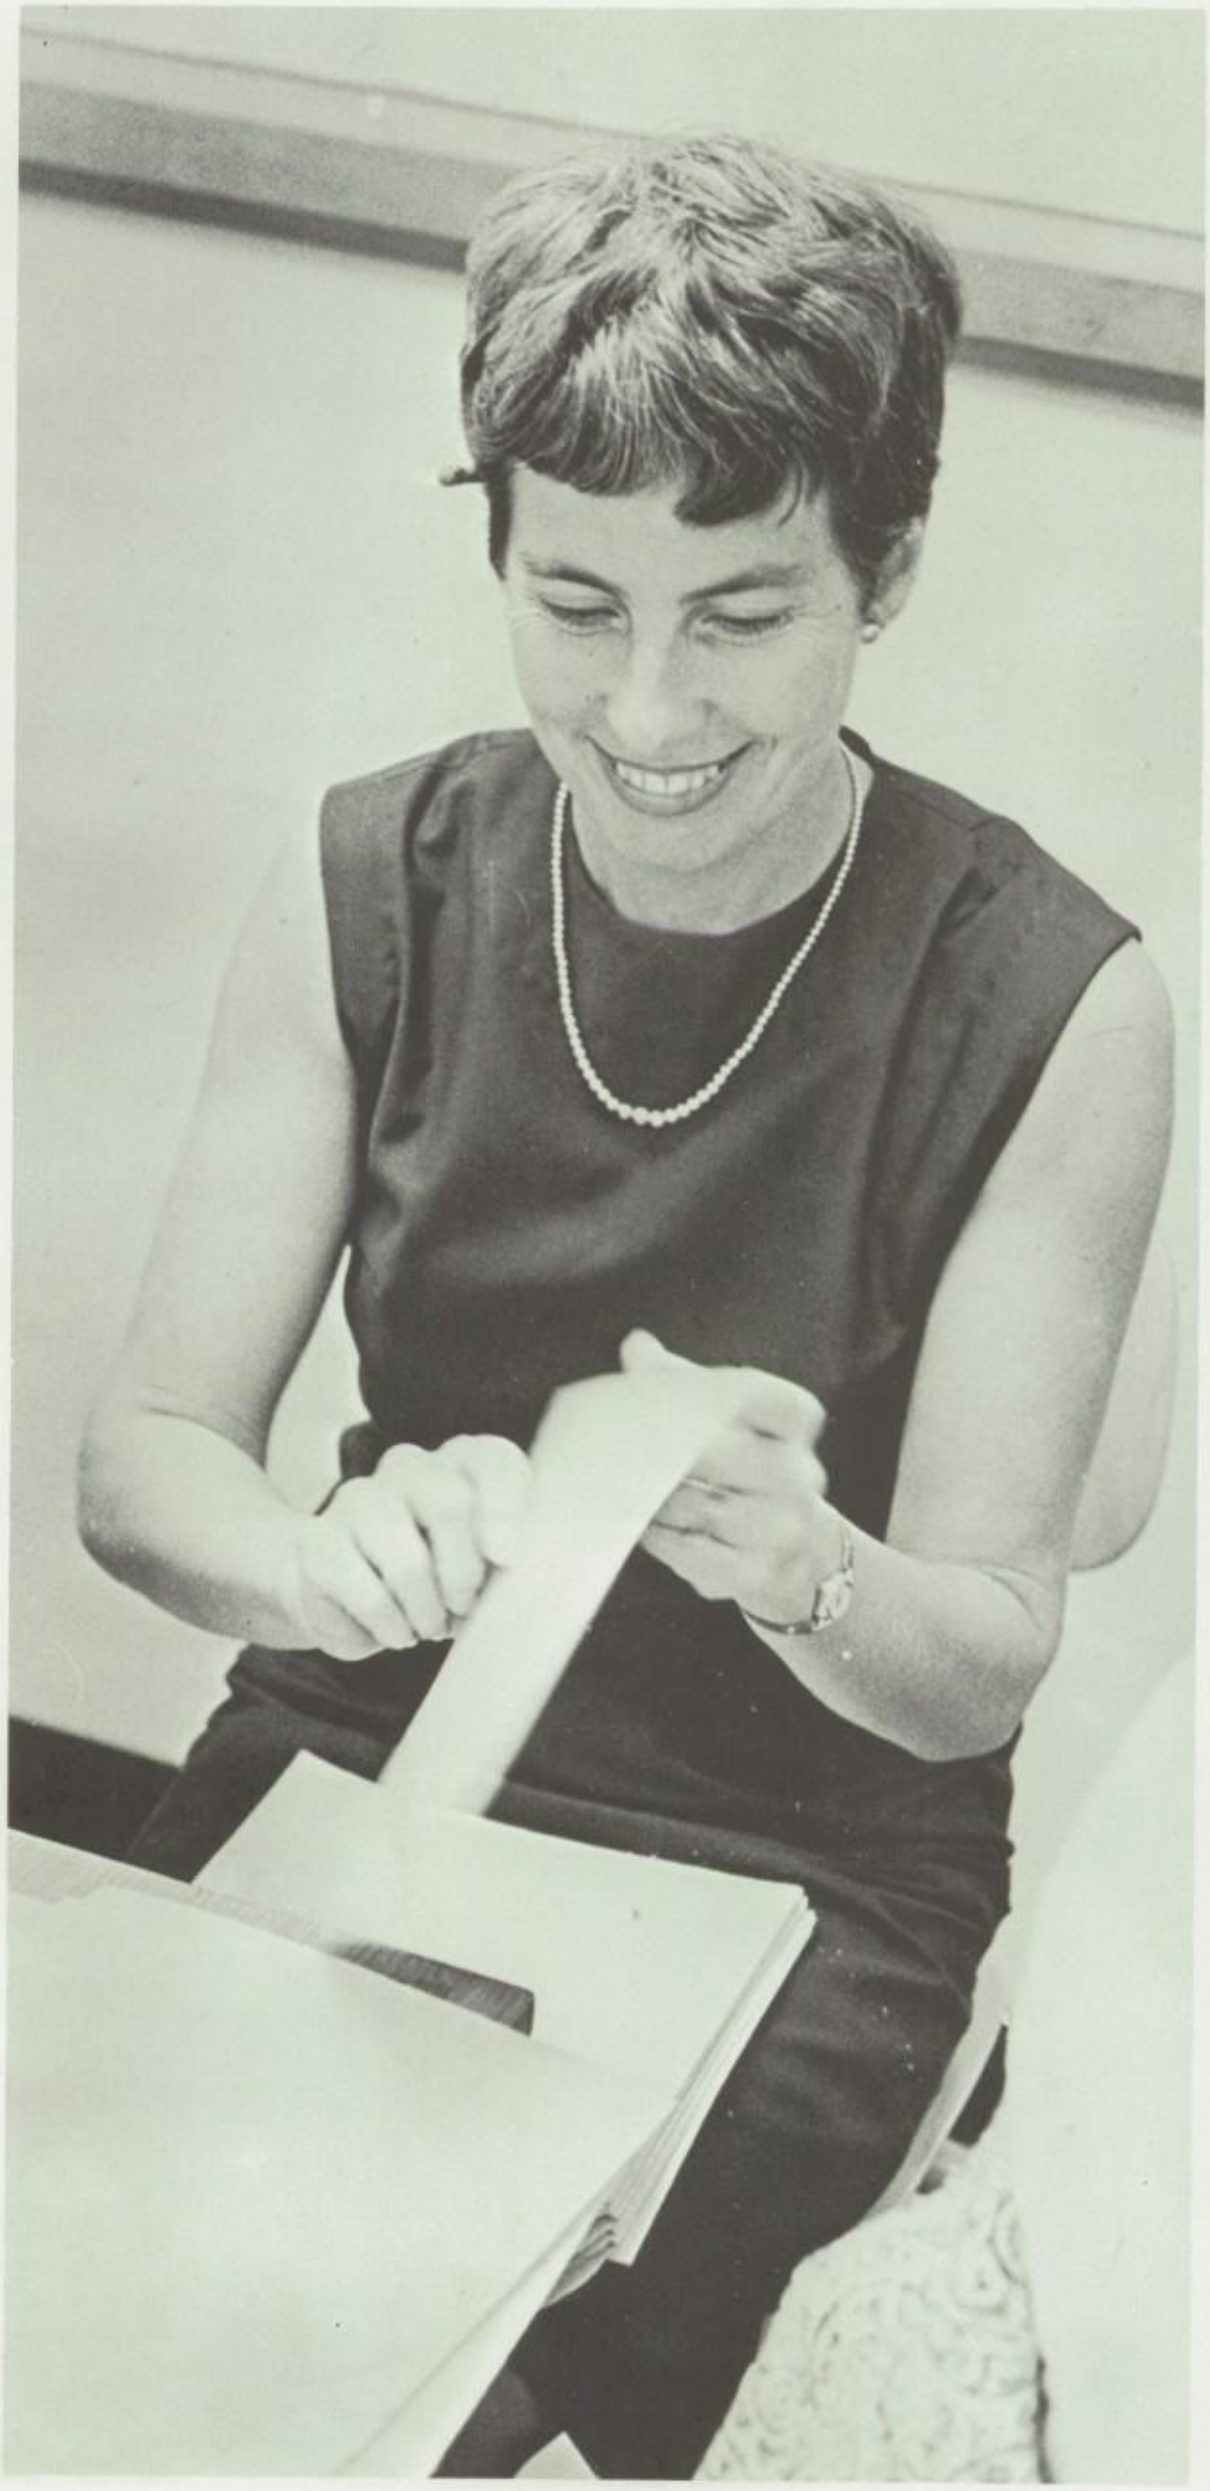


DSF secretaries serve counselors, faculty, students

A steady stream of students and visitors to aid, letters to type, and records to file occupied Douglas Freeman's three secretaries.

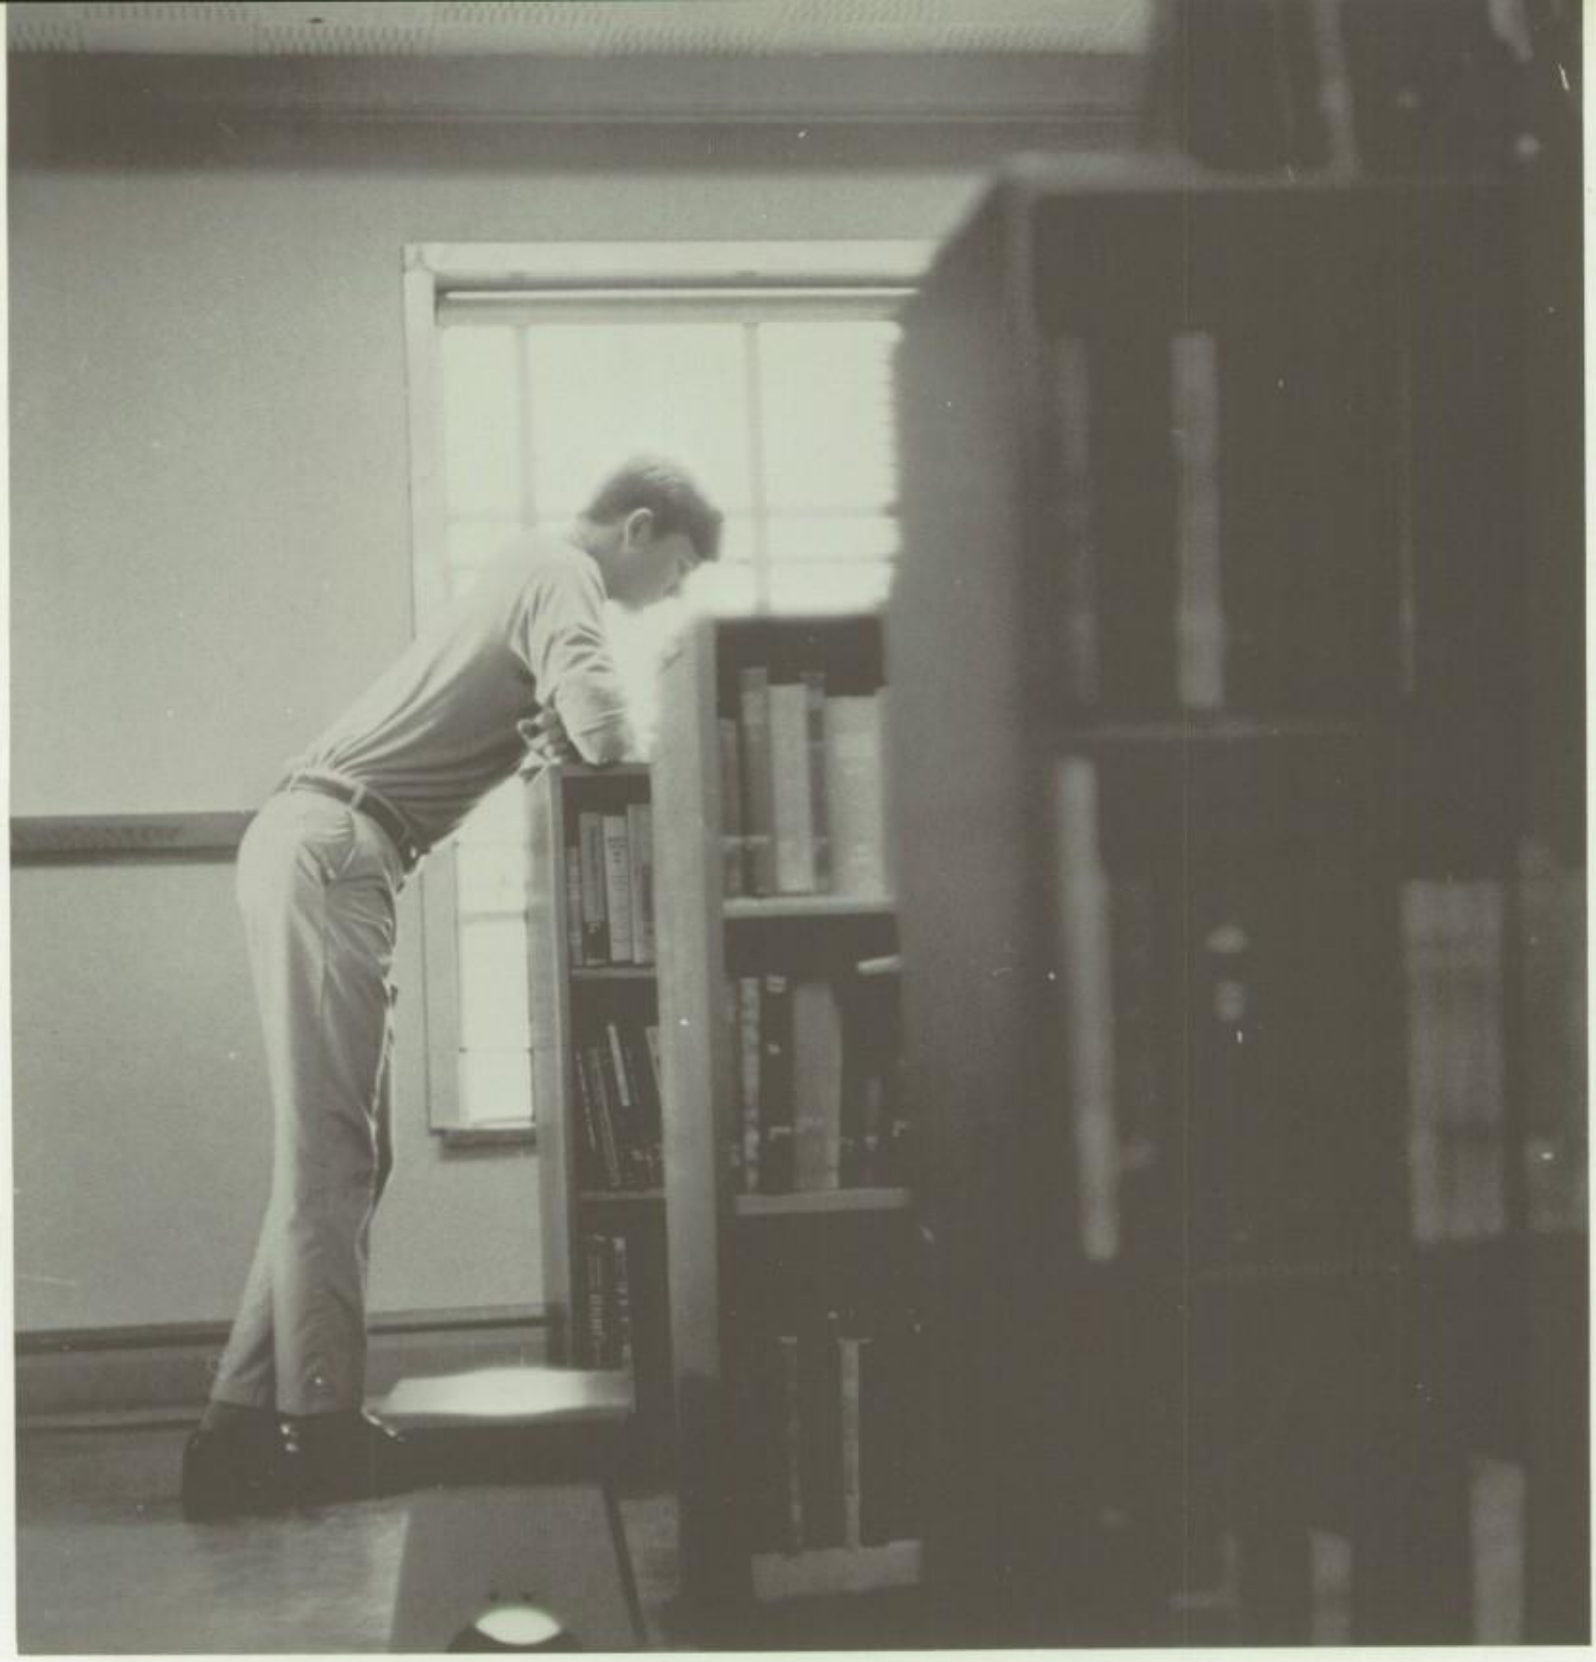
Mrs. Alice Culley and Mrs. Virginia Saunders managed general administrative business in the main office, while Mrs. Elsie Hoy served as secretary to the guidance counselors in the waiting room outside their offices. Mrs. Hoy's duties included calculating students' class ranks and entering six-week grades on their permanent records.

While writing receipts and collecting deposits, Douglas Freeman's bookkeeper, Mrs. Dorothy O'Keefe, collaborated with club treasurers in keeping their accounts balanced.



Filing Freeman's volume of student records constitutes one of Mrs. Culley's main responsibilities.

Quiet. Away from the hurry and noise of school affairs, Les Waldbauer peruses a science book from the shelves of the library.



Building expansion produces added bookshelf area

Checking each of 13,617 books against a shelf list was the job of librarians Mrs. Lorraine Myers and Mrs. Evelyn Foster who took an inventory twice during the school year.

The librarians also chose some 1,500 new volumes to be added to the library which was enlarged under the plans for the expansion of the school.

Readers' Guides serve as reference books for Carter White. Mrs. Foster and Mrs. Myers help her find a topic.

Concentration furrows the brow of Tommy Tokarz as workmen construct the new library wall. His companion Richard Hulcher is absorbed in his own book.

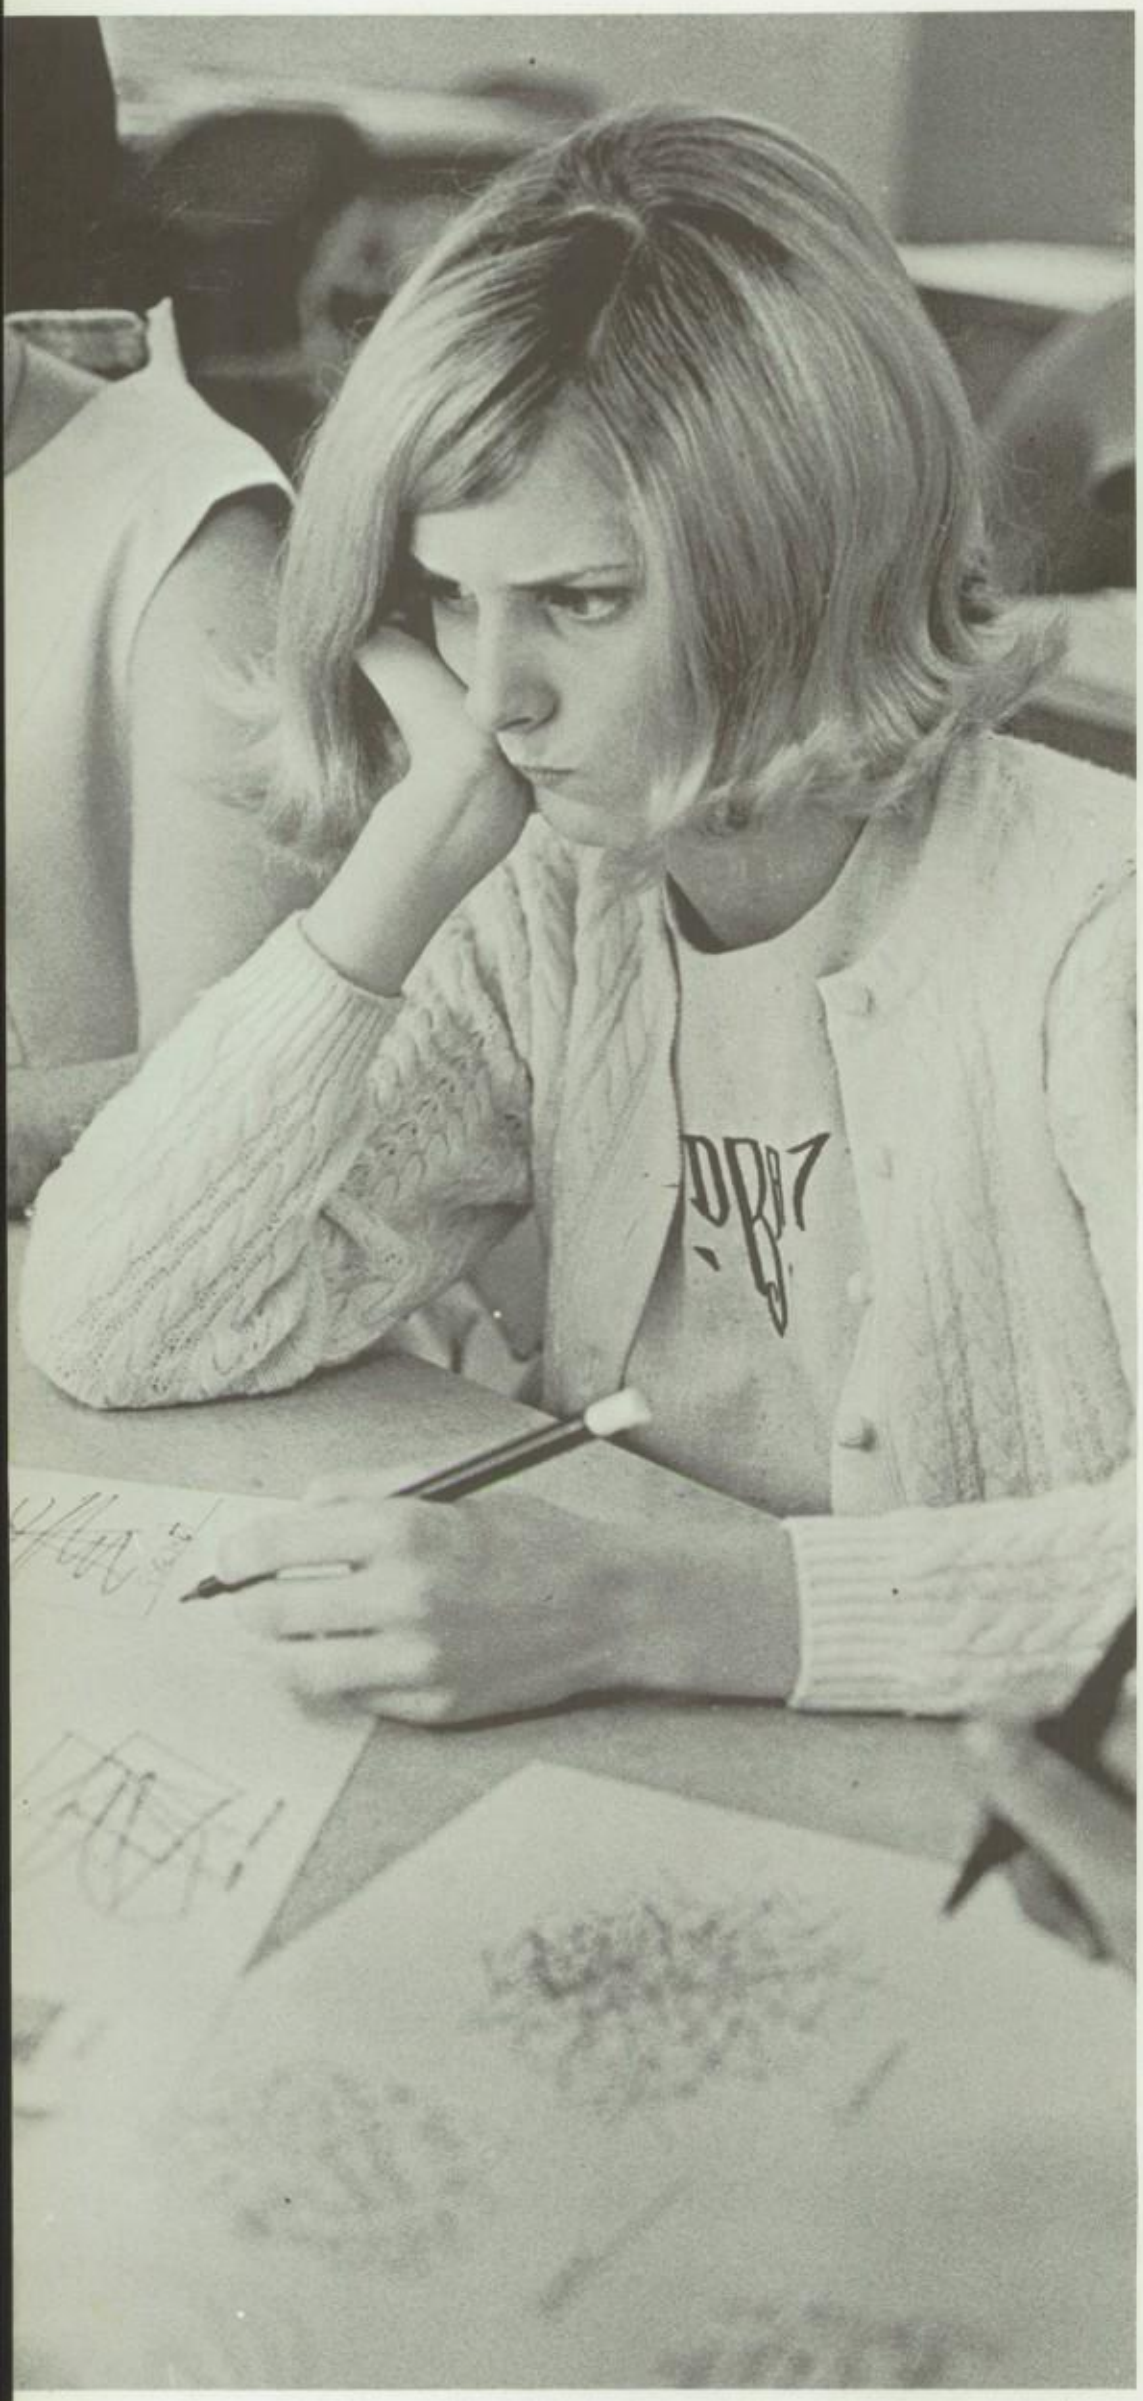
Counsellors speak to juniors' parents about colleges

Two chemistry classes? French instead of English?

In the first month of school the guidance counsellors were busy changing schedules for dissatisfied students. During the second semester sophomore and junior counsellors guided Rebels in planning their course of study for the next year.

Miss Faye Hill, director of the guidance department, headed the committee that administered College Boards and Achievement Tests.

Consultation. Junior and Senior counsellors, Mrs. Mabel Cosby and Mrs. Joyce Tidey, and director of the guidance department, Miss Faye Hill, combine their efforts to solve general guidance problems.



Frustration. Debbie Brown searches for an idea. Scratchy drawings on the sheet before her attest to rejected attempts.

Concentrating on proper spacing, Jennie Ronick and Miss Sara Wohlford mat Jennie's drawing.

Sketching the figure of a girl posing in the front of the room, Ginny Ashworth makes careful, delicate strokes in order to capture the model's position.

Fascinated classmates gather around as art teacher Judy Decker offers Cathy Carrington suggestions for better color tone in her painting.

Poetry, mood music inspire Freemanites to produce art work

Potters' wheels, newly added to the Art Department, enabled Rebels to work with clay with increased ease.

Pen and ink sketches, along with pastels and water colors, adorned Douglas Freeman's art rooms during the fall and winter. Students interested in art spent the first semester building valuable skills and learning new techniques.

Miss Sara Wohlford and Miss Judy Decker emphasized the importance of an understanding of art through the teaching of art history.

Mood music, played in the class rooms, inspired students with ideas for art works. Rebel artists also illustrated poetry read during class.

The Spring Art Festival awarded ribbons to students with outstanding entries. Several advanced students sold their works to interested buyers.

Adjusting a pressure gauge, Pat Watt demonstrates to Marsha Butler the proper techniques for operating a duplicating machine. The mysteries of complex business machines unfold in Office Practice.

BUSINESS DEPARTMENT. Mrs. Myrna Childress, Shorthand, Typing; FBLA. Miss Dorothea Moore, Typing; Quill and Scroll, HISTORIAN. Miss Marian Breeden, Shorthand, Bookkeeping; Chairman of Business Department; HISTORIAN. Miss Phyllis Simmons, Vocational Office Training, Typing, Office Practice. SECOND ROW: Mr. John Briggs, General Business; ICT; VICA, Coach. Mr. Ernest Venturino, Typing, Bookkeeping, Economic Business Problems; Coach, Key Club.

Racing against the clock, Nancy Brazier hurries to make the quota in a speed drill.

3M photo copier, IBM typewriters aid business students

Clicking ticker tape machines greeted general business students visiting the Richmond Stock Exchange.

The general business classes also entered into debates with one team taking the labor unions' views of management. Students instigated a mock stock purchasing system. Each class picked four stocks and plotted their progress on a bar graph.

Due to the seven-period day, Typing I classes were flooded. Other courses offered by the Business Department were second year typing, office practice, shorthand, and bookkeeping. Offered for the first time, the Economic Business Problems course emphasized economics during the first semester and law during the second.

New aids to learning in the Business Department were a 3M photo copier and several IBM typewriters.

Pausing from the use of his overhead projector, Ernie Venturino listens to a student's question during his Economic Business Problems class.

Fasces. Pem Hunter lingers after Mrs. Mapp's English class to discuss ancient Roman authority, symbolized by a fasces.

ENGLISH DEPARTMENT. FRONT ROW: Miss Nancy Brown, English; COMMENTATOR. Miss Kathryn Moore, English. Mrs. Frances Scott, English. Mrs. Mary Eubank, English Dept. Chairman; HISTORIAN. Films, such as this one portraying "Pardoner's Tale" from Chaucer's Canterbury Tales, add new dimensions to the English students' understanding of imaginary action and significance of literature.

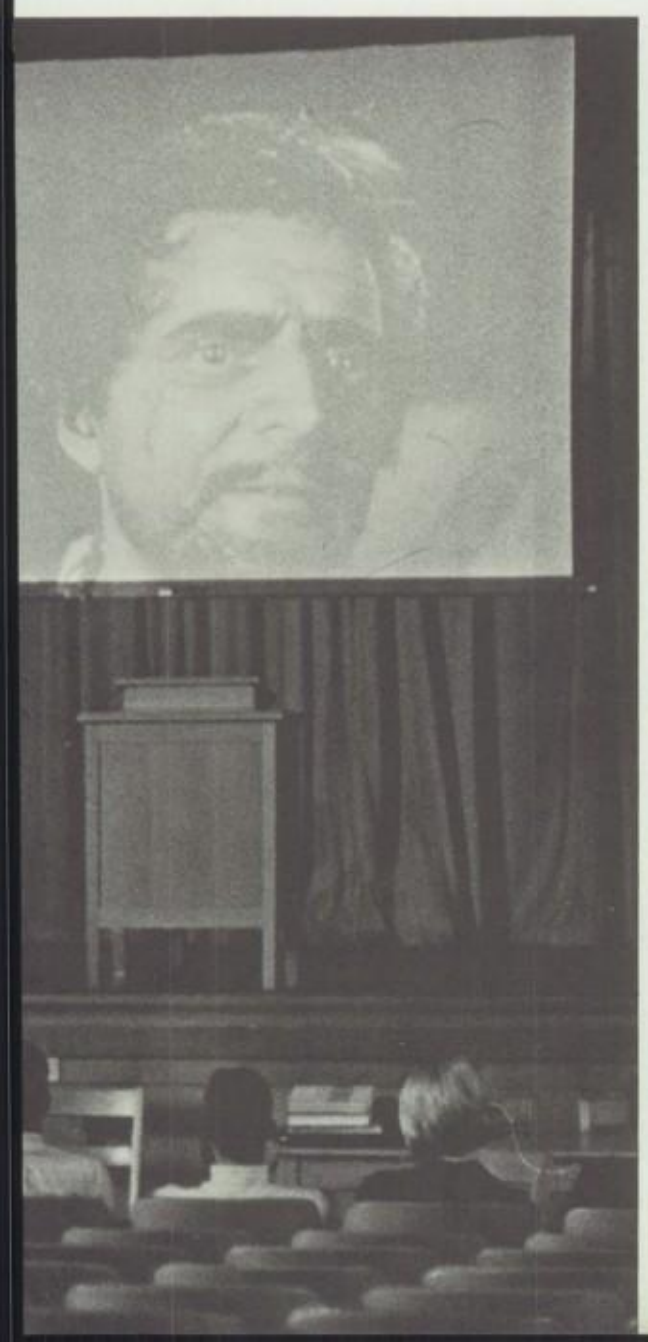
Educational TV, amateur dramatics enliven English

"They'll be calling us witches, Abby!" This line resounded through the vacant halls as a student read from a play. The sound came not only from drama classes where students practiced their lines, but also from English classes where the acting of plays, such as Arthur Miller's "The Crucible," led to a deeper understanding of the playwright's dramatic abilities.

Elective courses such as creative writing, speech, and world literature allowed interested students to specialize in particular areas of English.

New literature texts greeted students attending Douglas Freeman. In addition to a re-edited form of the previous books, there were special editions for honors classes. These editions outlined a course which concentrated on a few authors rather than the traditional course which provides a general survey of authors.



Surf's Up! Foreign exchange student Ann Dimaano simulates the motions of a surfer riding out to catch a wave. Interested speech students surround the board to watch the demonstration which followed an explanation showing the proper surfing techniques.

Knitting sweaters, sewing formals, tailoring coats occupy students

An additional lunch hour for students of home economics?

Third-year classes planned and served entire meals as a part of the course. They also designed and made clothes. One fourth-year student made an evening dress, another a coat, and several knitted sweaters.

After the rooms in the department were repainted, advanced students made draperies and chair covers and refinished the furniture for the room.

Home Ec. teacher Mrs. Verna Sanger invited guests to talk to the classes. Two of the speakers were Mrs. Barnette, the Henrico County nurse, who spoke on childcare, and Mr. Ransone, the representative from a paint company, who demonstrated the techniques of antiquing furniture.

Illustrating the pattern instructions, Mrs. Verna Sanger explains the method of lining a wool jacket to Paula Davies.

Elegance. Margaret Moore pours iced water into crystal goblets to finish a formal dinner table service.

Pressing a plaid jumper, Sue Walls applies a damp cloth to the seam. Margaret Moore holds the stretched fabric.

Rebels draft to recorded music from shop stereo

Soft, symphonic sounds drifted from room 123. Inside at drafting tables Freemanites worked busily on their mechanical drawing projects.

Under the guidance of teachers Gary Silverman and Henry Wheeler, students developed technical drawing skills by copying or creating such things as three-dimensional figures, architectural plans, and geometric shapes.

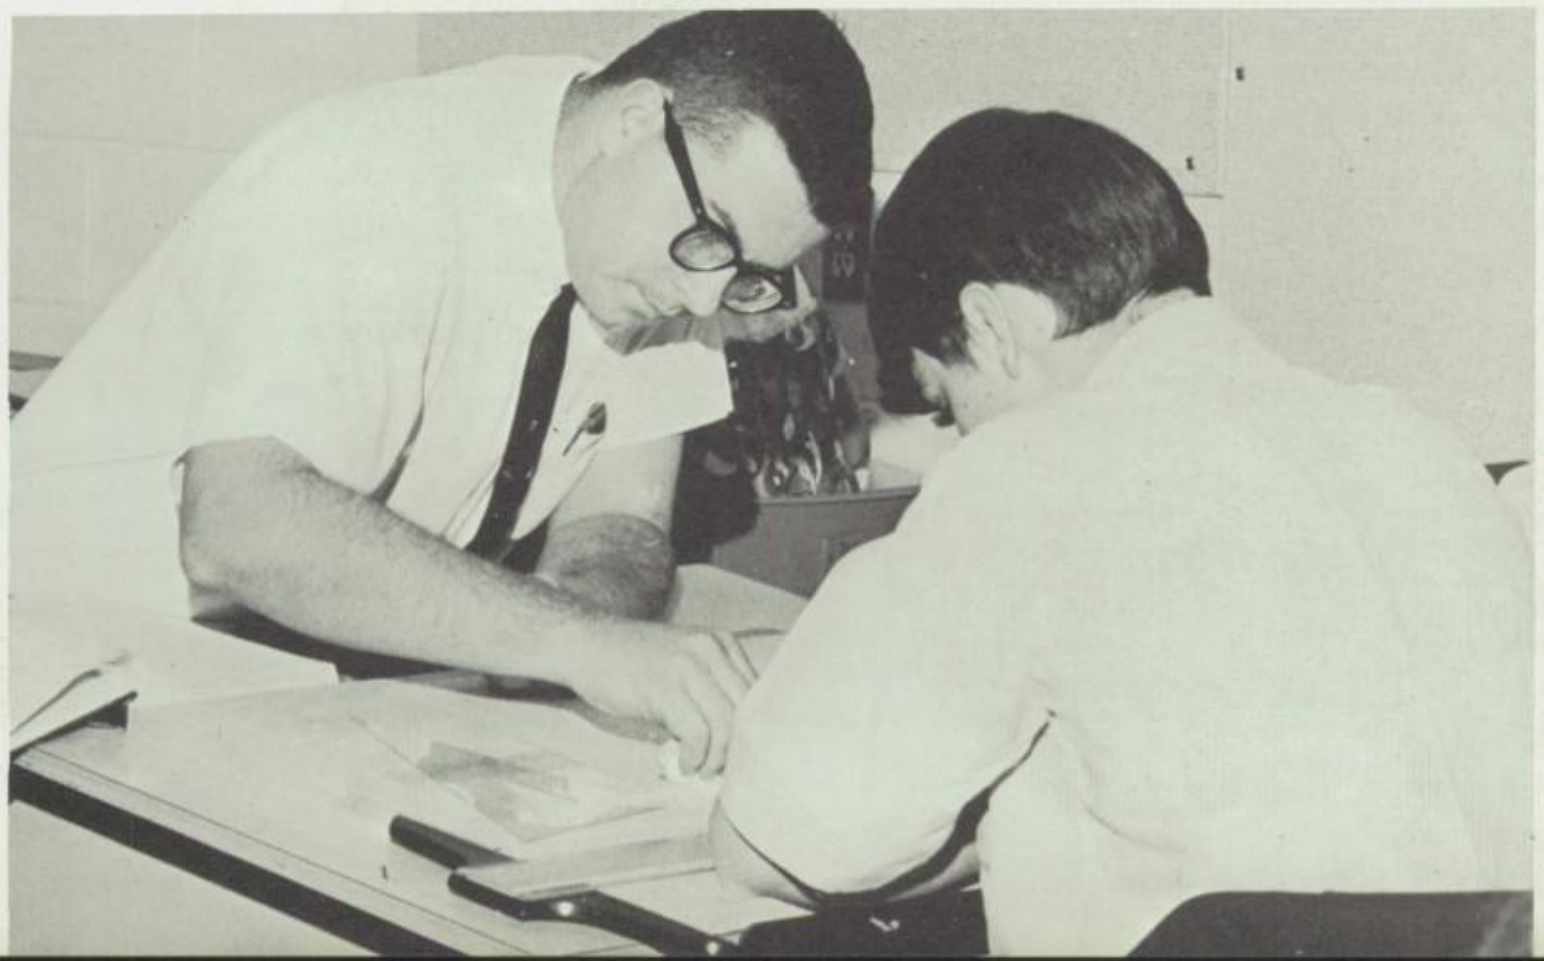
Sounds of hammers and saws blared from the wood shop. Here students worked on individual projects ranging from book racks to cabinets. Mr. Benton Satterfield taught Rebels the techniques of woodworking by hand and with power tools.

Sprinkled with flying sawdust, sophomore Richard Williams guides a plank through the saw. Mr. Benton Satterfield watches as a maple table takes shape.

Absorbed in the explanations of Mr. Henry Wheeler, senior Marty Rock watches the precision of his intricate drawings.

Teamwork. Paul Thomas assists Steve Landin with the operation of the shop's drill press. DSF boys often lend a hand to insure that the projects of fellow students will be completed on time.

Individual assistance from Mr. Gary Silverman provides draftsman Jeff Minter with the additional understanding needed to complete his mechanical drawing layout.



Punching the add button, Mrs. Phyllis Simmons, the Vocational Office Training co-ordinator, instructs Diane Pennington in the use of the adding machine. At the State Department of Education, Diane prepares to type a letter as one of her employers, Mr. Gordon Falleson, points out a correction to be made. Applying her previous training, Diane begins her job as part-time secretary.

Consultation. Mike Myers and Skipper Deems discuss the presentation of awards at the District VICA convention. Rebel ICT members won eighteen of forty-two trophies.

ICT, VOT offers students vocational, on-job training

Leaving Douglas Freeman at 12:30, Rebel ICT and VOT members completed their day with on-the-job training in such positions as beauticians, secretaries or mechanics.

The Industrial Cooperative Training program provided for a combination of classroom study in four courses and job training as apprentices to professionals.

Vocational Office Training, a new course, furnished students with a basic knowledge of office procedures. The use of dictaphones, duplicators, calculators, and typewriters was also included in preparing students for their after-school jobs.

Examining employment applications, Mr. John Briggs explains to Cynthia Geoghegan and Linda Allen the procedures in obtaining a job.

LANGUAGE DEPARTMENT. FIRST ROW: Mrs. Maria Vidal, Spanish; Spanish Club. Mrs. Kathleen Mears, Latin, Humanities; Chairman of Language Department. Miss Sara Jo Griffin, French; Y-Teens I, Sophomore Class. Miss Pam Adams, Latin; Junior Classical League, Y-Teens II. SECOND ROW: Miss Joy Peele, Spanish; Spanish National Honor Society. Miss Marlise Bok, German; German Club. Miss Donna Robinson, Spanish; Y-Teens IV, Spanish Club. Miss Carolyn Baker, French; Majorettes, COMMENTATOR. Mrs. Pauline Robertson, French; French Club, French National Honor Society.

Festive spirits penetrate classrooms. Myra Land and Elaine Simpson join in a French Christmas carol.

Love is the topic of discussion in Miss Adams' class. Thomas Walton and Diane Moxon answer Debbie Morey's question on the Latin derivative "amo."

Operation. Acting out a scene from the Spanish novelette "Marianela," Jeff Harrison performs an eye operation on Brock Livick as Susie Spears and Tim Ferramosca assist.

Novels, dramas, songs stir interest in language studies

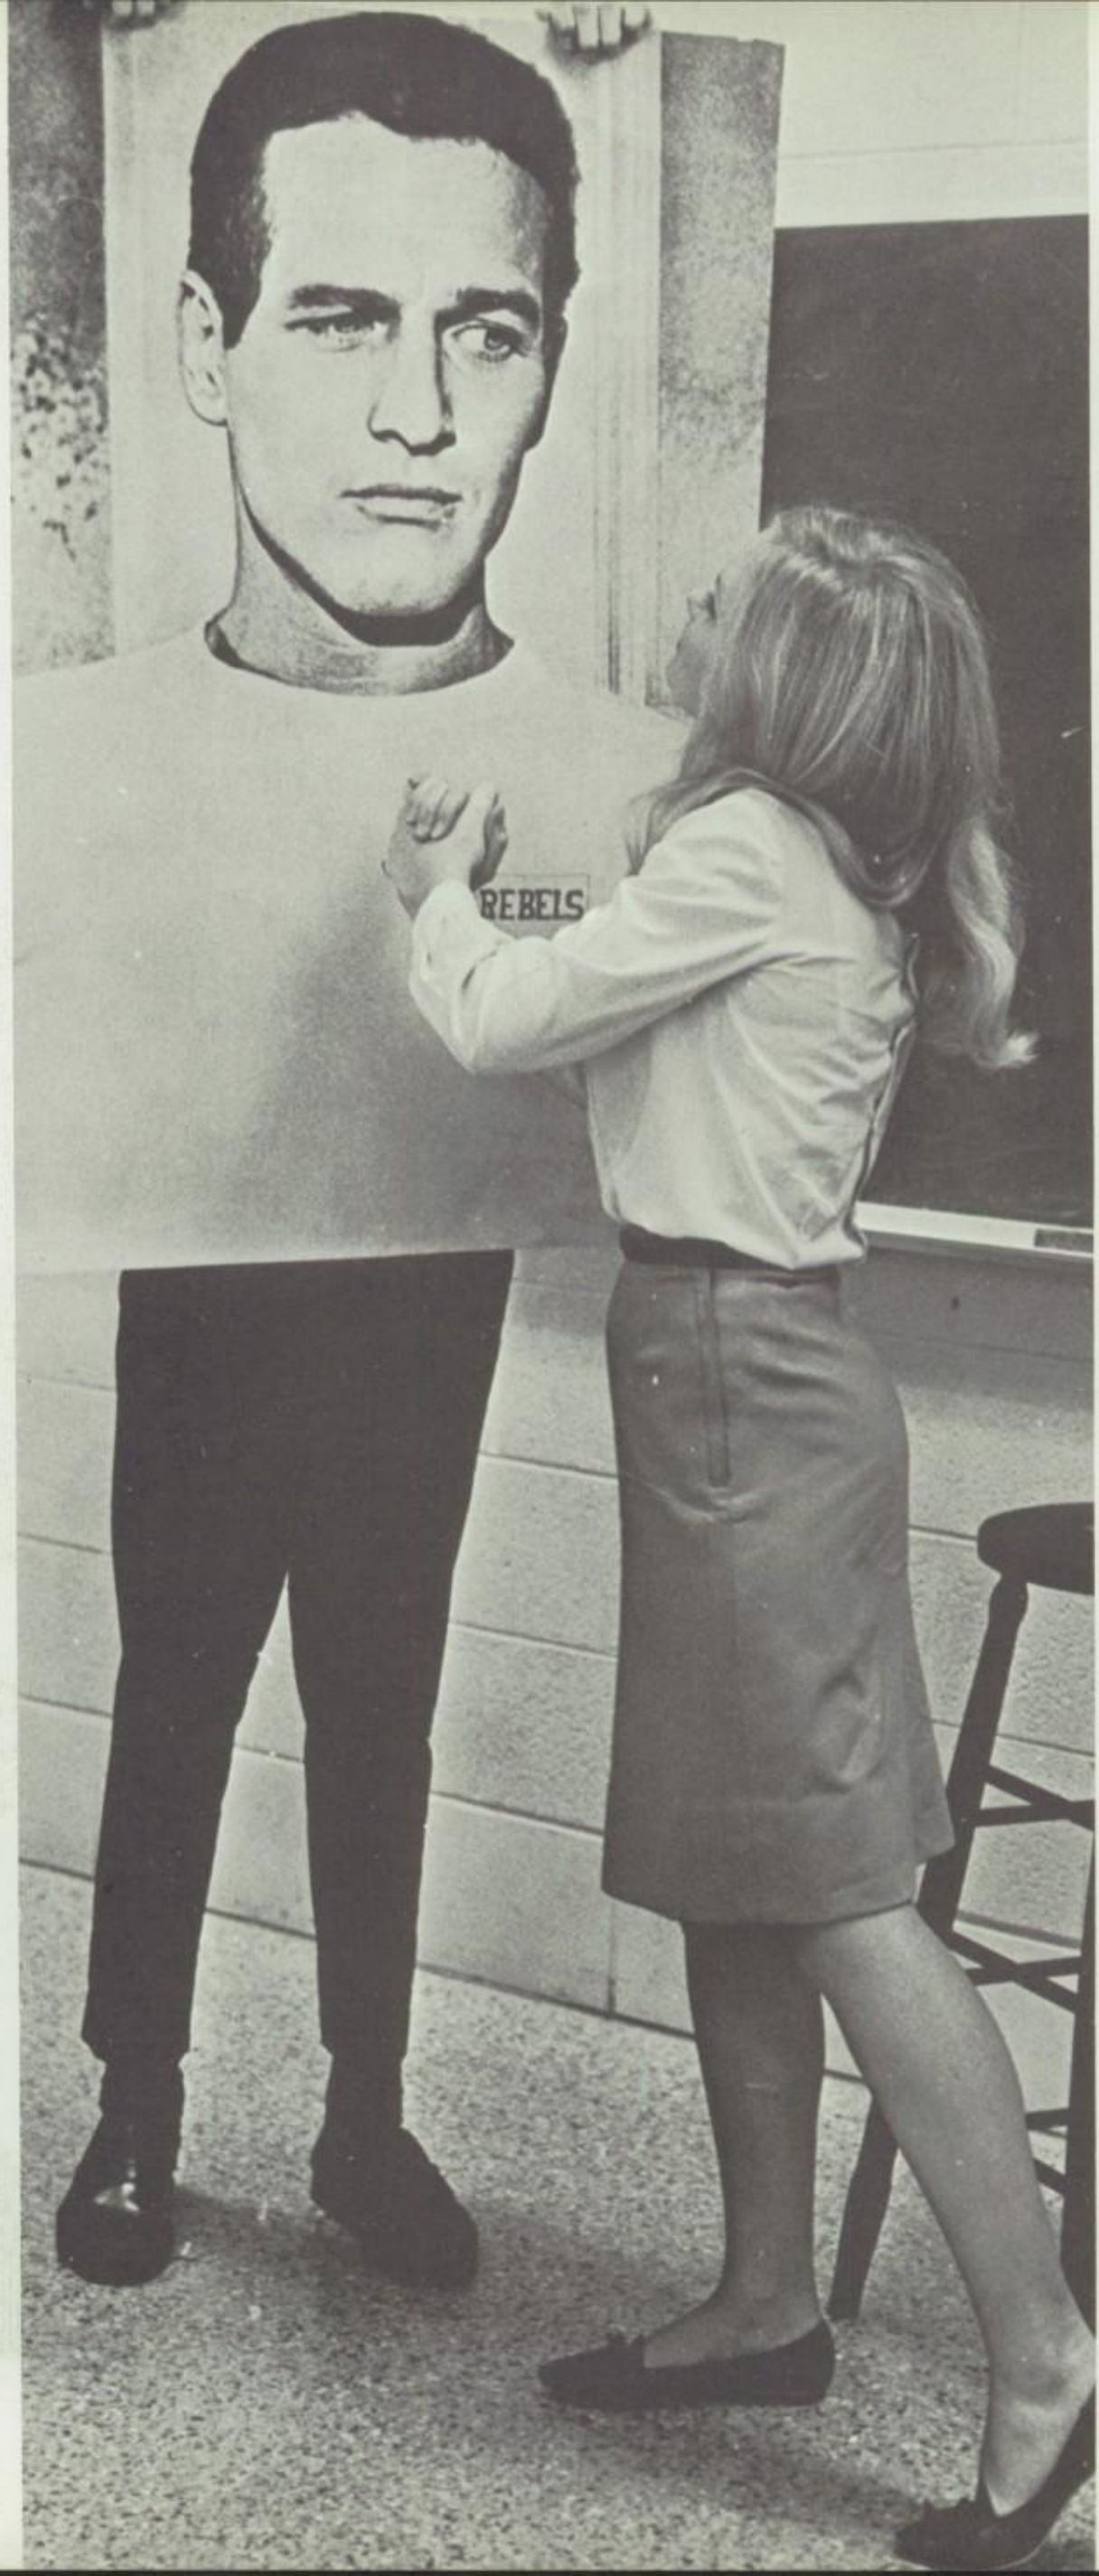
Was Mrs. Vidal teaching drama?

For a change of pace, Spanish teacher Maria Vidal allowed several students to write and produce a play in Spanish, which was presented to the entire class. The group sang a Spanish song with guitar accompaniment at the end of the production.

Fifth-year French students read twelve complete works. During the winter, the class went to John Marshall High School to see the French Production "Tartuffe."

Fernado Riviere, a native of Bogota, Colombia, visited Miss Donna Robinson's Spanish classes and spoke on life in South America.

Latin classes concentrated on Greek and Roman literature. Mrs. Mears' classes enjoyed her vacation slides of the Román countryside.



Kiss me! Barbara Winstead practices reflexive French verbs by imploring Paul Newman to embrace her.

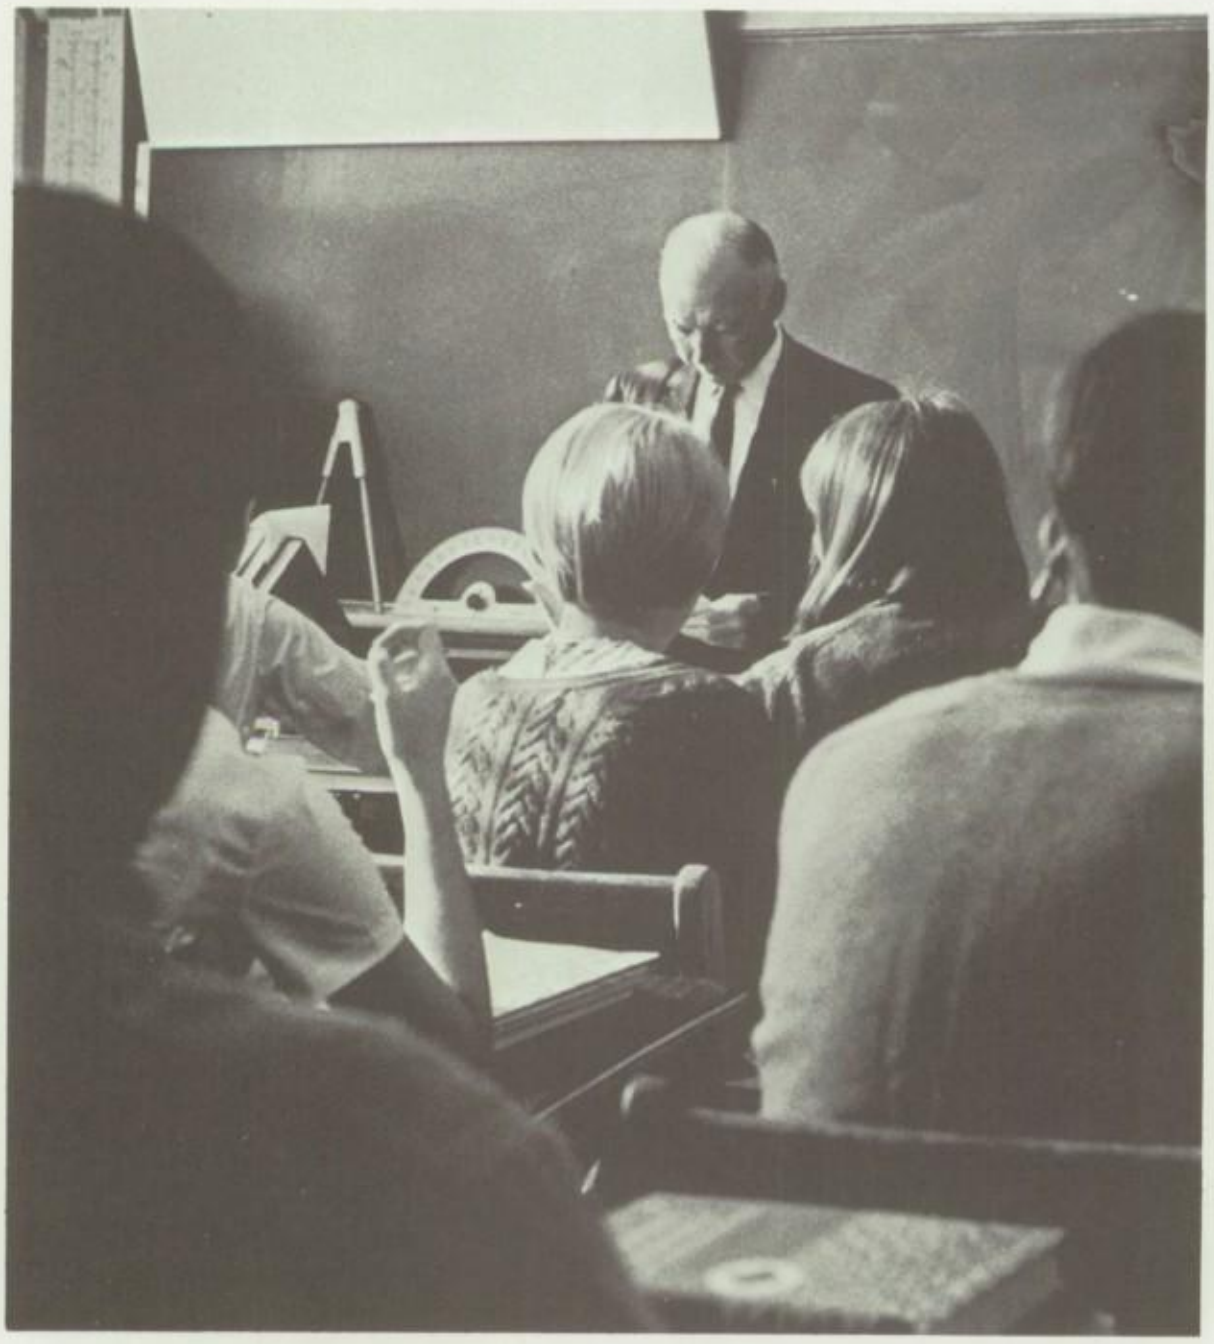
Models, posters, diagrams illustrate math theories

What are asymptotes, quadratic equations, corallaries, and foci?

Rebels learned these and other mathematical vocabulary words in the nine math courses offered at Douglas Freeman. To enhance the students' learning experience, teachers used overhead projectors and wooden models of geometric figures to convey math concepts.

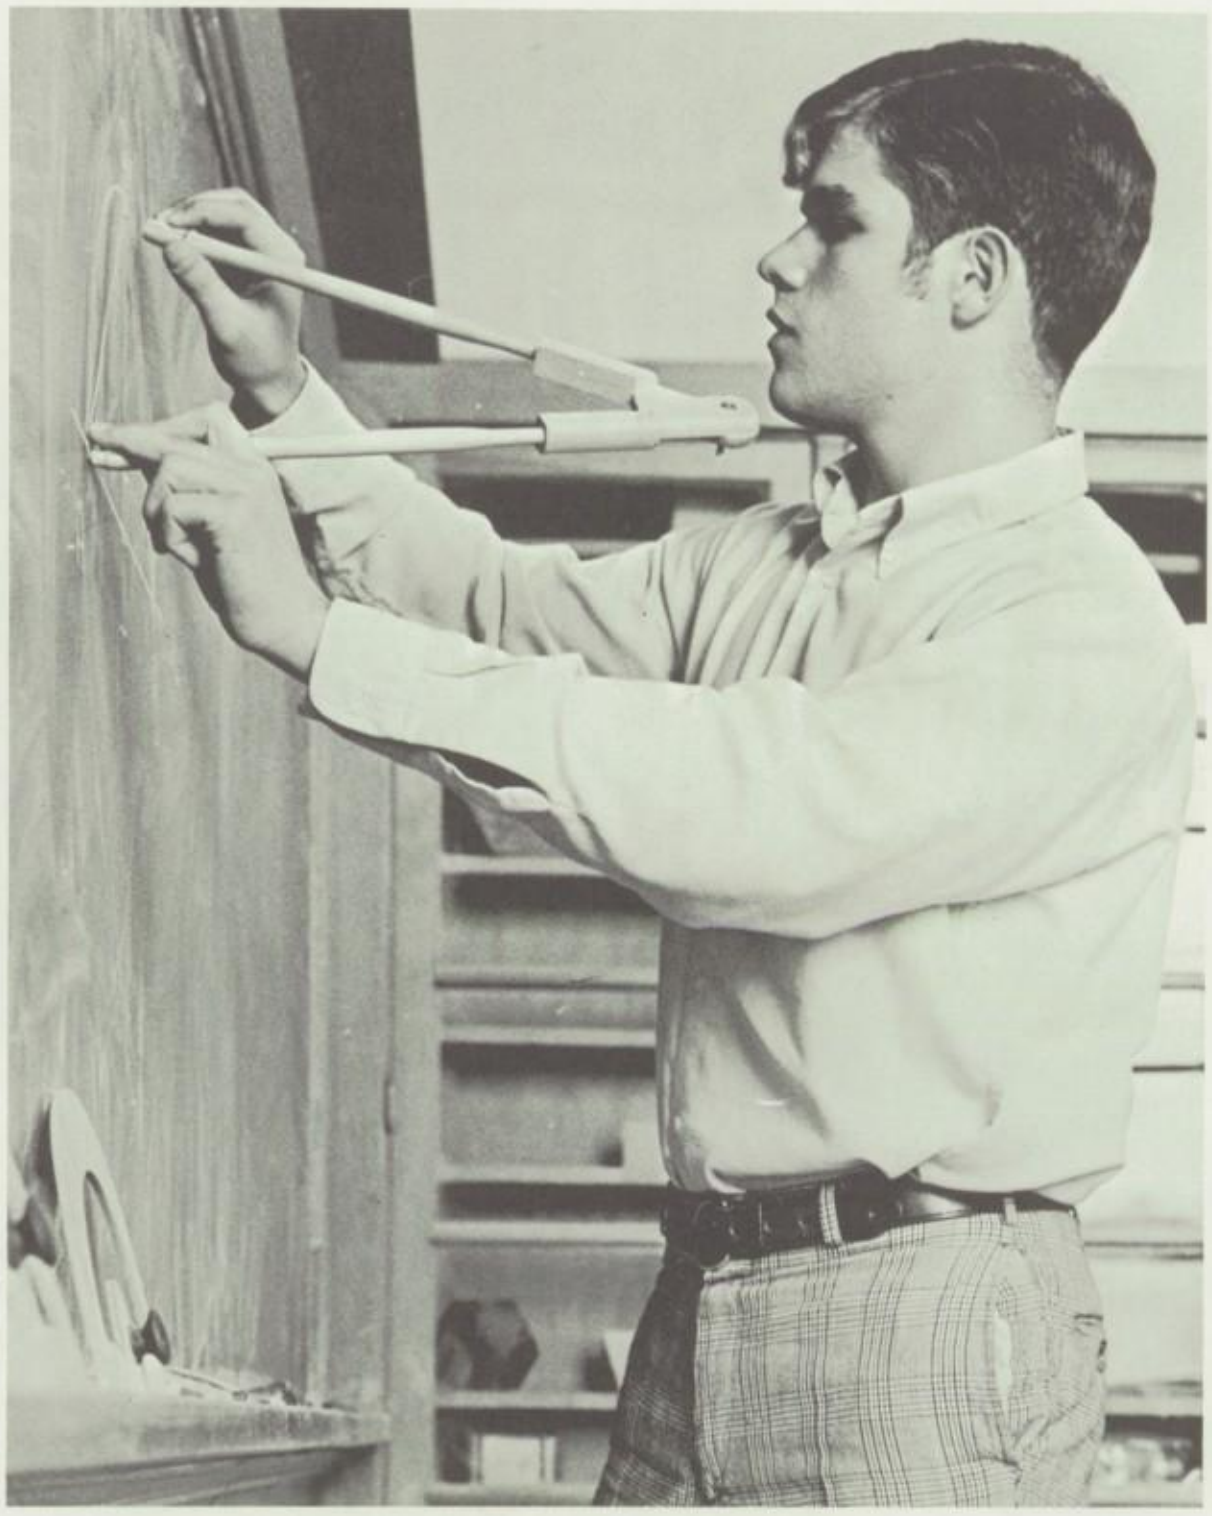
As projects, students made models and diagrams to explain geometric laws and algebraic principles.

Some classes designed posters to illustrate the uses of math in everyday life. Other classes reported on the lives and theories of great mathematicians in history. Using straight lines, Mrs. Hardin's geometry classes designed curves.



Framed by a class full of students, math teacher Mr. John Plummer introduces a new algebraic principle to his seventh period class.

"Jackson to the board!" Pointing her finger, Mrs. Margaretta Stephens directs a student to go to the board while classmates look on with interest.



Bisecting an angle, Eric Whitesell uses a special protractor to demonstrate his construction on the board in front of his math class.

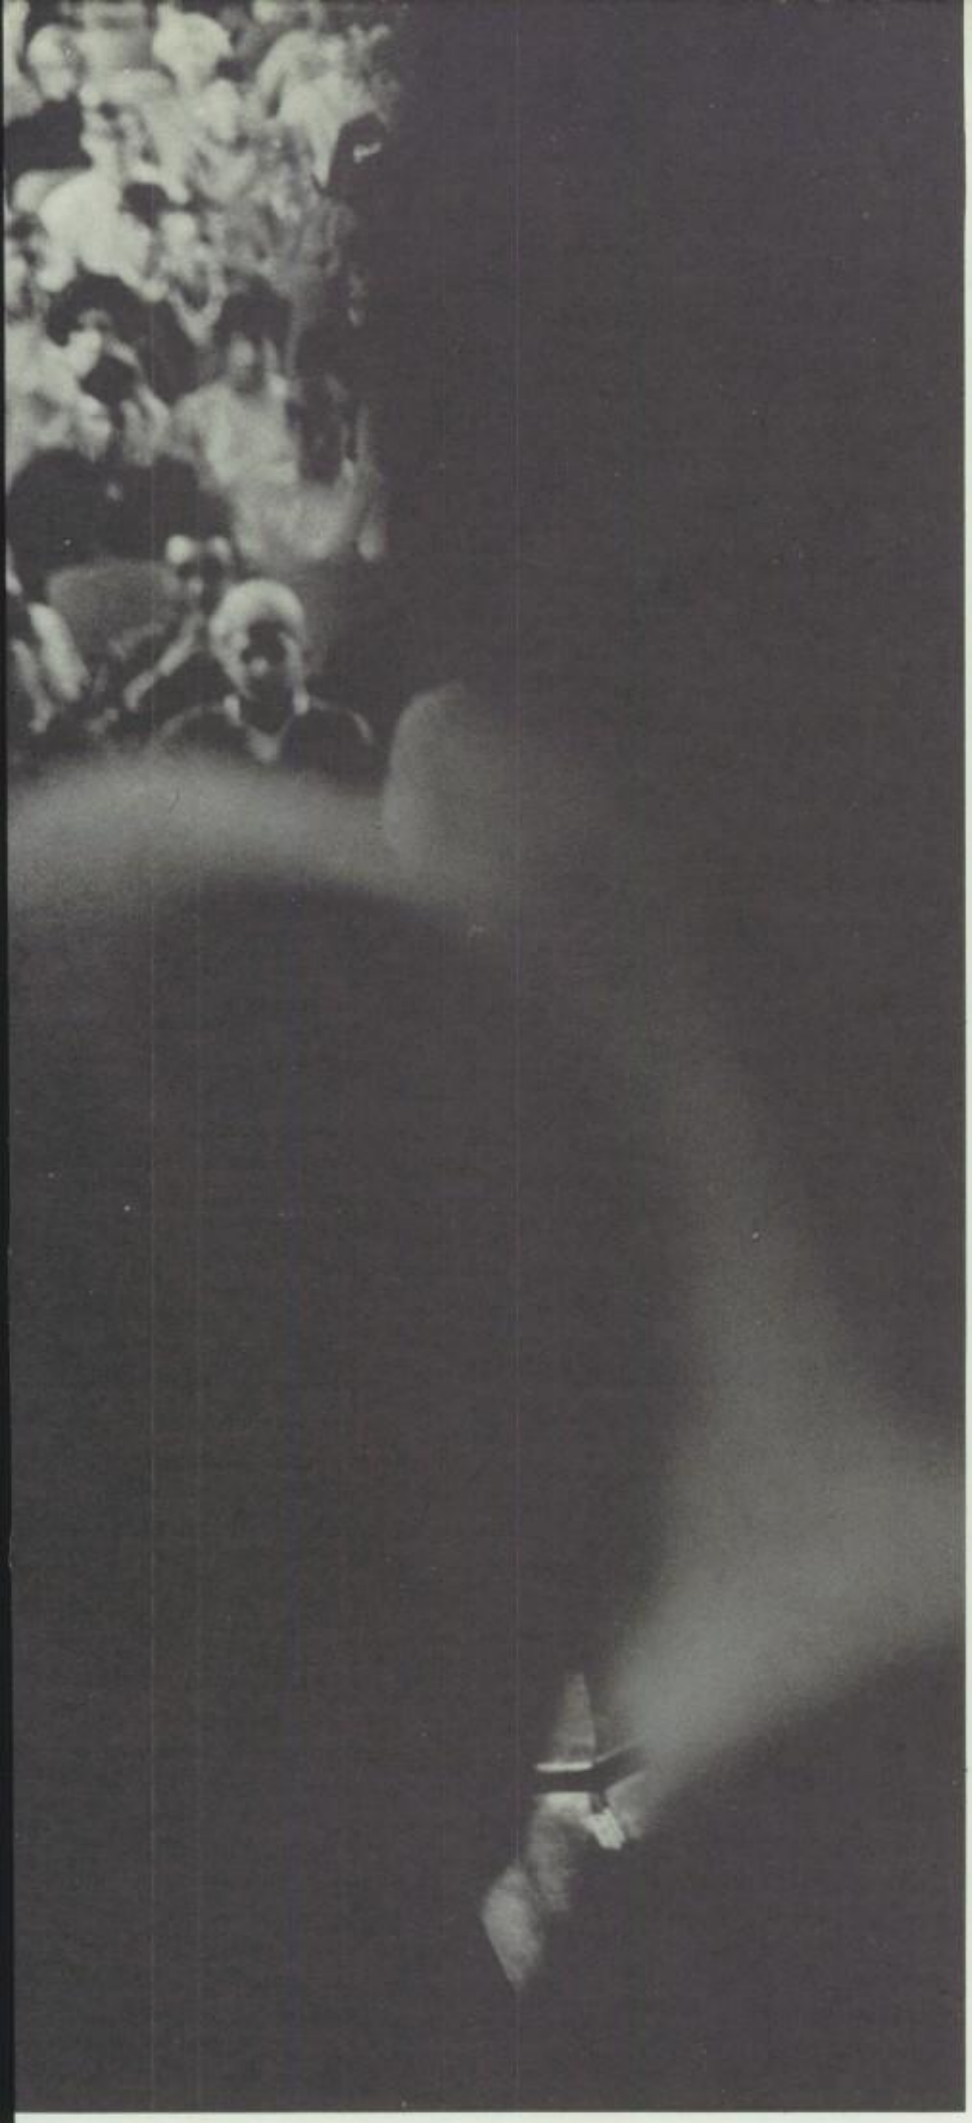
Band is host to Festival; chorus sings in assemblies, 'My Fair Lady,' 'Night of Music'

Breaking the silence of an early Saturday morning, band members from over forty schools competed in the District Music Festival. Three judges from out of state graded bands on a point scale from one to six.

Within the confines of the DSF bandroom, students studied different aspects of music. Listening to records, the music appreciation class learned the basic characteristics of music during the Romantic period of the arts.

Under the direction of Mrs. Nancy Shield, DSF's new chorus teacher, the chorus performed at the Thanksgiving Assembly. The group also sang the "Hallelujah Chorus" during the Christmas assembly.

Band and chorus members were busy in the spring with the "Night of Music." With the Drama Department they produced the musical "My Fair Lady."



Push. Band director Hunter Purdie uses a special brass instrument to remove a mouthpiece that has become stuck in the neck of a student's trumpet.

Sing out! Director Miss Nancy Shield indicates a sustained note by her expression and gesture. Here, the chorus performs at the annual Thanksgiving assembly.

Absorbed in the action of an exciting football game, band members forget their instruments for the moment and follow the action on the field.

Exhausted from competing in a vigorous game of field hockey, sophomore Judy Williams returns the red penny identifying her team, before going into the locker room to change clothes.

Pass. Jim Phillips heaves the football just as an opponent dashes forward to tackle him.

Missed by Judy Williams, the volley ball falls to Sally Williams who waits tensely.

Gymnasts vault, balance, swing on new equipment

Body mechanics and modern dance kept girls in shape during the winter months. Students of physical education also participated in folk dancing, hockey, gymnastics, archery, girls' basketball, and softball.

The phys. ed. course for boys included soccer and football in the fall, gymnastics in the winter, and softball in the spring.

Both classes spent alternate six-week periods studying health. Studies of neuroses and psychoses of the human mind and of systems of the body highlighted this course.

New equipment added an extra dimension to the study of gymnastics. Uneven parallel bars, a horse without pommels, a vaulting box, and an additional balance beam enabled students to develop a broader range of skills in this field of exercise.

Lab experiments with guinea pigs

Experimentation with a laser beam, the study of the motion of bubbles in liquids, the relationship of smoking and cancer, and the effects of alcoholic beverages on mice were a few of the projects undertaken by third semester science students.

Annually the science department receives invitations to specially sponsored science programs. A few selected students attend a symposium of science and humanities at Charlottesville and a program given by the Virginia Electric and Power Company on chemical engineering in Richmond.

Microscopes and baby chicks in biology, bunsen burners in chemistry, and micrometers and slide rules in physics became familiar objects to science students.

SCIENCE DEPARTMENT. FRONT ROW: Mrs. Marguerite Trent, Chemistry; Chairman Science Department; Science Club. Mrs. Anna Slawson, Chemistry; Science Club. Miss Juliet Allen, Biology; Science Club. Marine sergeant speaks, shows film to Freemanites

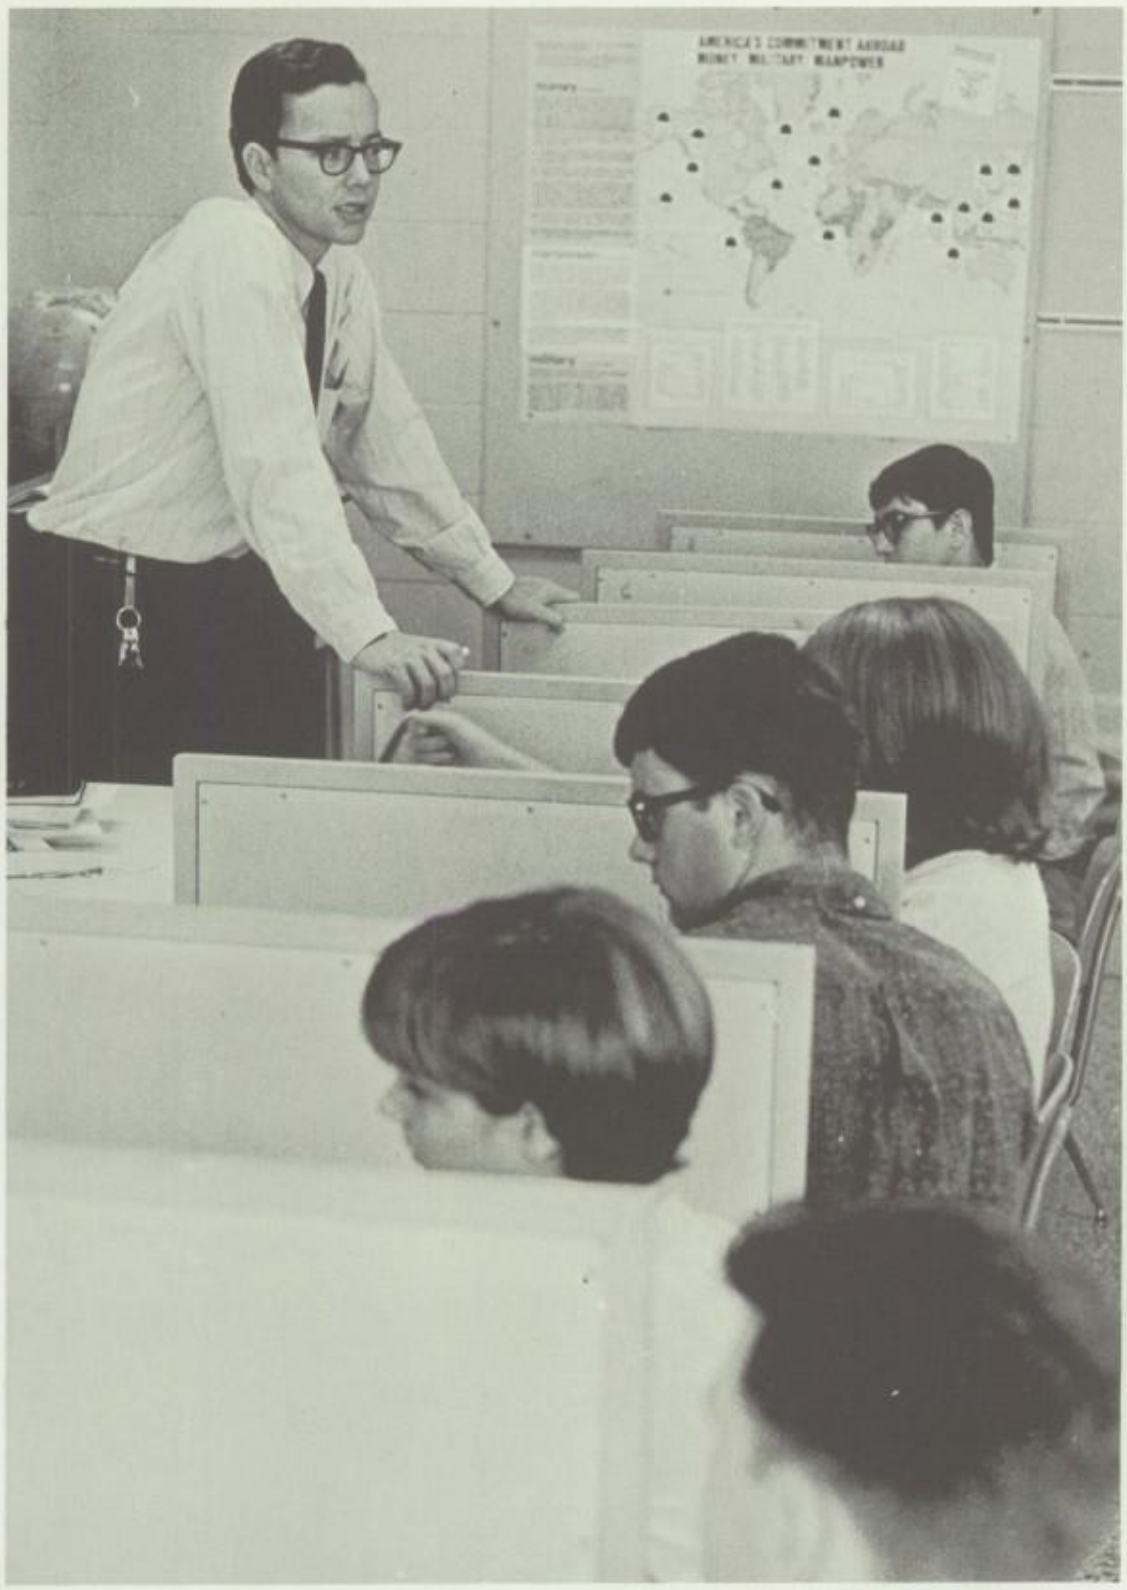
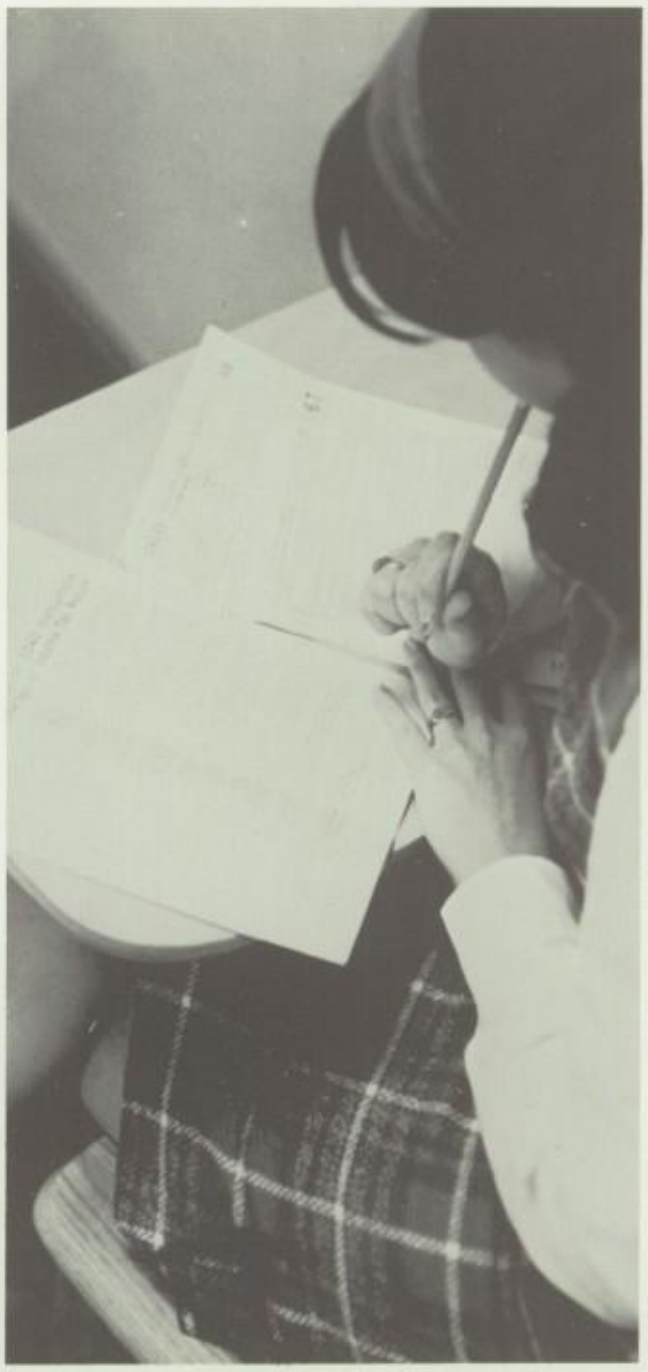
"Why Vietnam" was the title of a film shown to students of social studies. A marine sergeant, having recently returned from Vietnam, answered questions about the movie.

At another time David E. Satterfield, U. S. Congressman from the Third District, spoke to government students on current political problems.

Humanities, a newly instigated course, stressed ancient classical literature. This class dealt not only with social studies, but spanned many departments.



Overcrowded conditions force Mr. Hugh Fraser's U.S. government and history classes to meet in room 130, the former language lab.



Studying complicated income tax forms, Linda Nieder endeavors to relate them to the revenue legislation that she has learned in government class.

Attentive students of humanities listen as Mrs. Mears explains the importance of the Greek tragedy "Agamemnon."

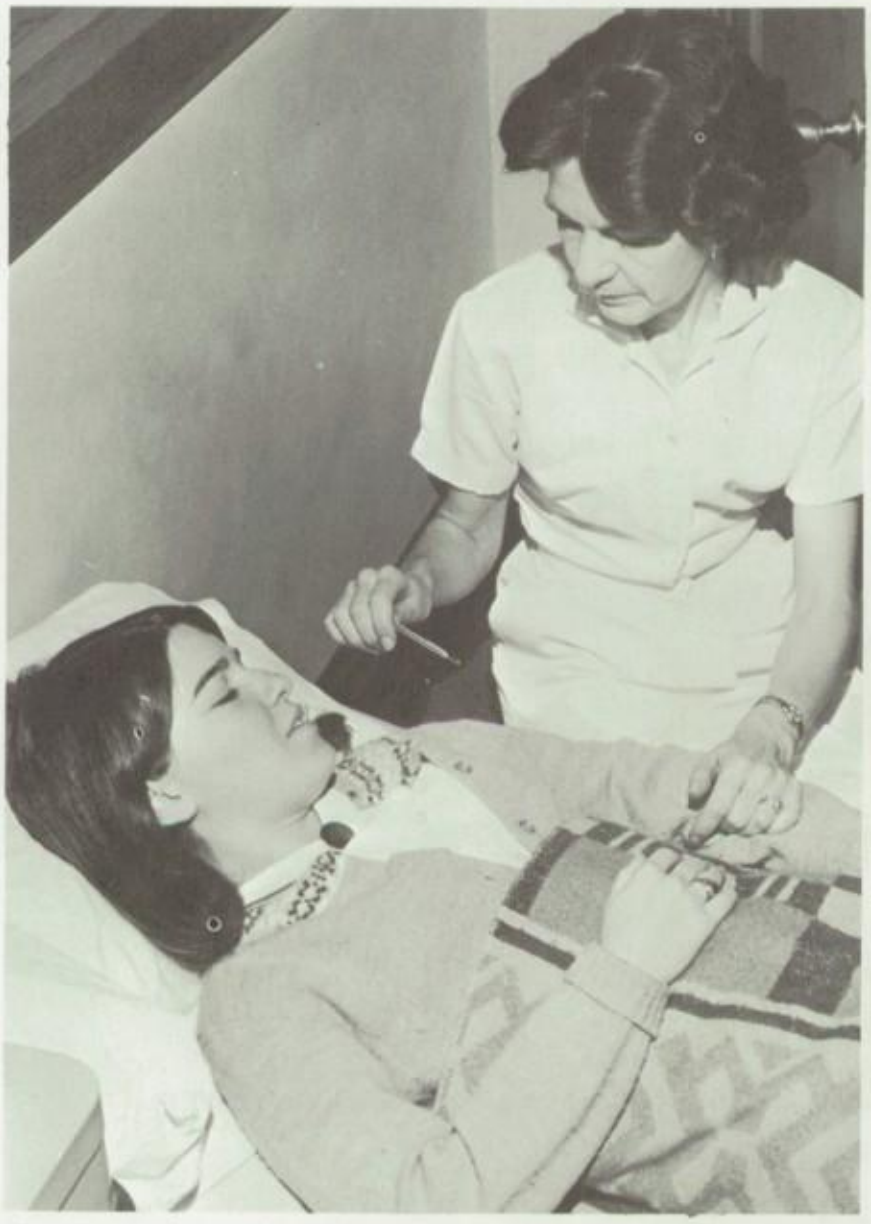
Despite ailments, hardness of clinic beds discourages many potential patients

Eyes, ears, noses, and throats came under the careful scrutiny of Douglas Freeman's nurse Mrs. Margaret McNeal.

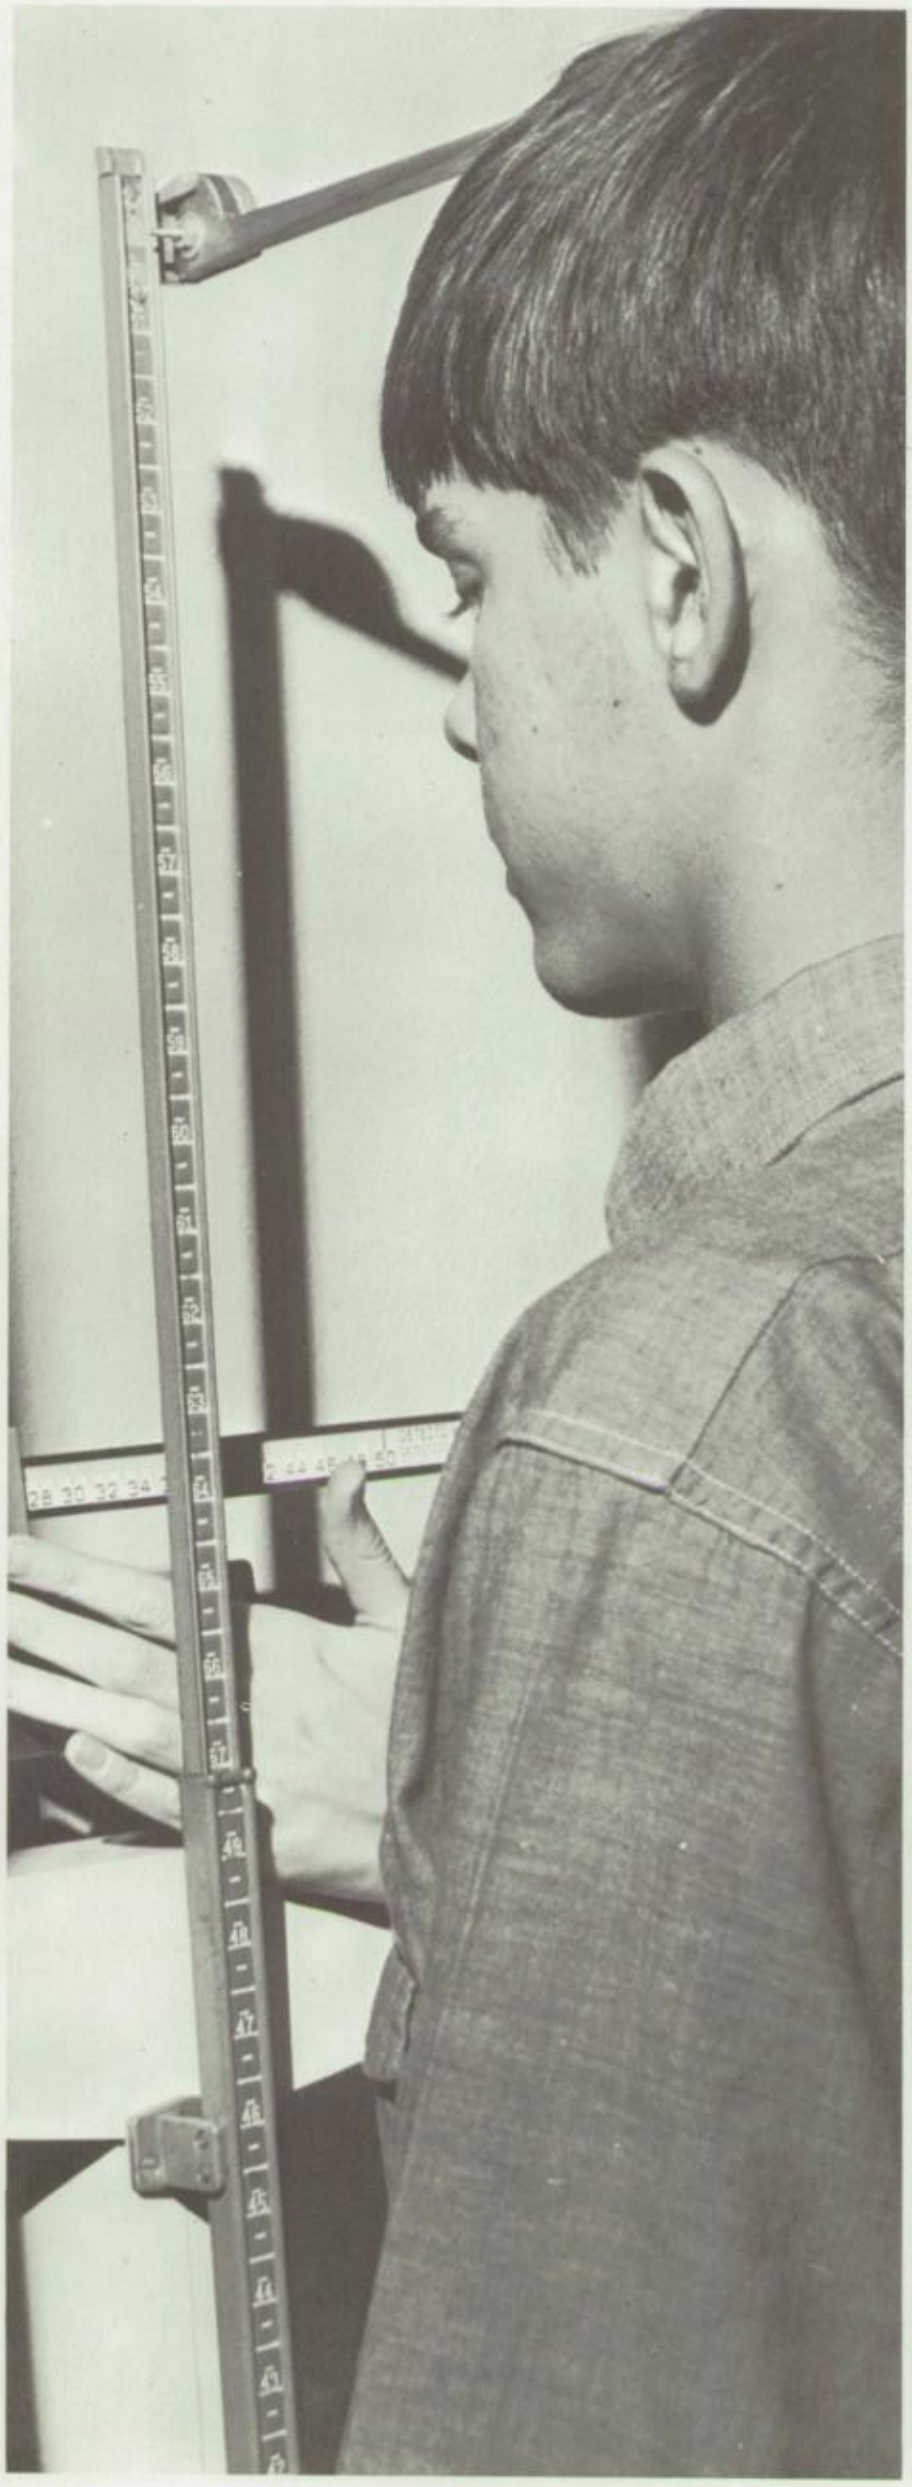
Each year the nurse weighs and measures the height of every Rebel. These statistics are placed in a yearly health report to the state.

Besides students complaining of common illnesses, Mrs. McNeal received many unusual cases, such as a girl who had swallowed her contact lens and a certain group of boys who appeared regularly on test days.

In the clinic, in addition to such first aid equipment as bandages, splints, and antiseptics, there is also a resuscitator to be used in emergency cases.



Concerned. Mrs. Margaret McNeal carefully studies the thermometer which has recorded junior Lynn Neese's above normal temperature.



Precision. Tommy Blanton watches with interest while Mrs. Margaret McNeal gently adjusts the scales to the proper balance.

FRONT ROW: Mrs. Evelyn Eldridge, Mrs. Edna Gunn, Mrs. Lucinda Whitaker. SECOND ROW: Mrs. Gladys Spurlock, Mrs. Vernelle Cole, Manager Mrs. Barbara Ranson.

Interlude. Douglas Freeman janitor Lancaster Robinson pauses momentarily from performing his maintenance duties to scan the hectic cafeteria scene during the second lunch period.

Cafeteria staff serves hot meals for Freeman clubs, sports banquets

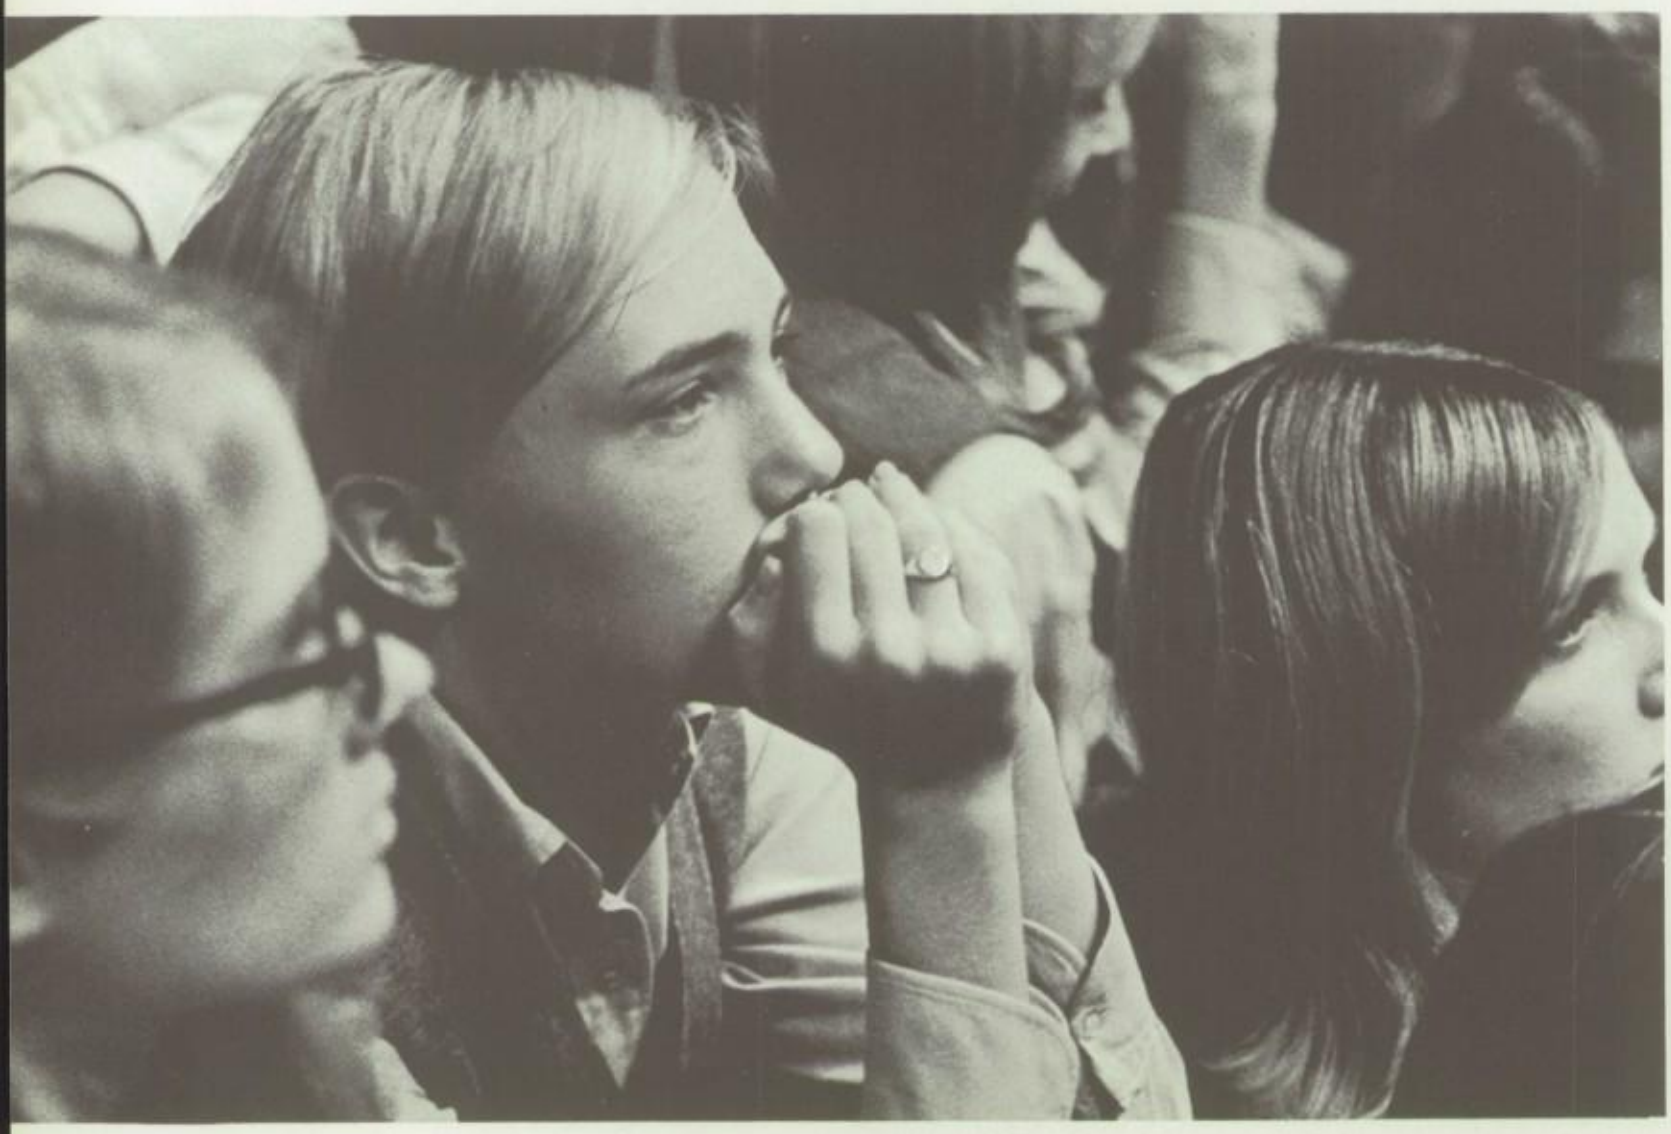
26,000 and $4,300 were familiar figures to Mrs. Barbara Ranson, manager of Douglas Freeman's cafeteria. 26,000 was the average number of cartons of milk sold monthly, and $4,300, the average amount of money received for lunches and milk.

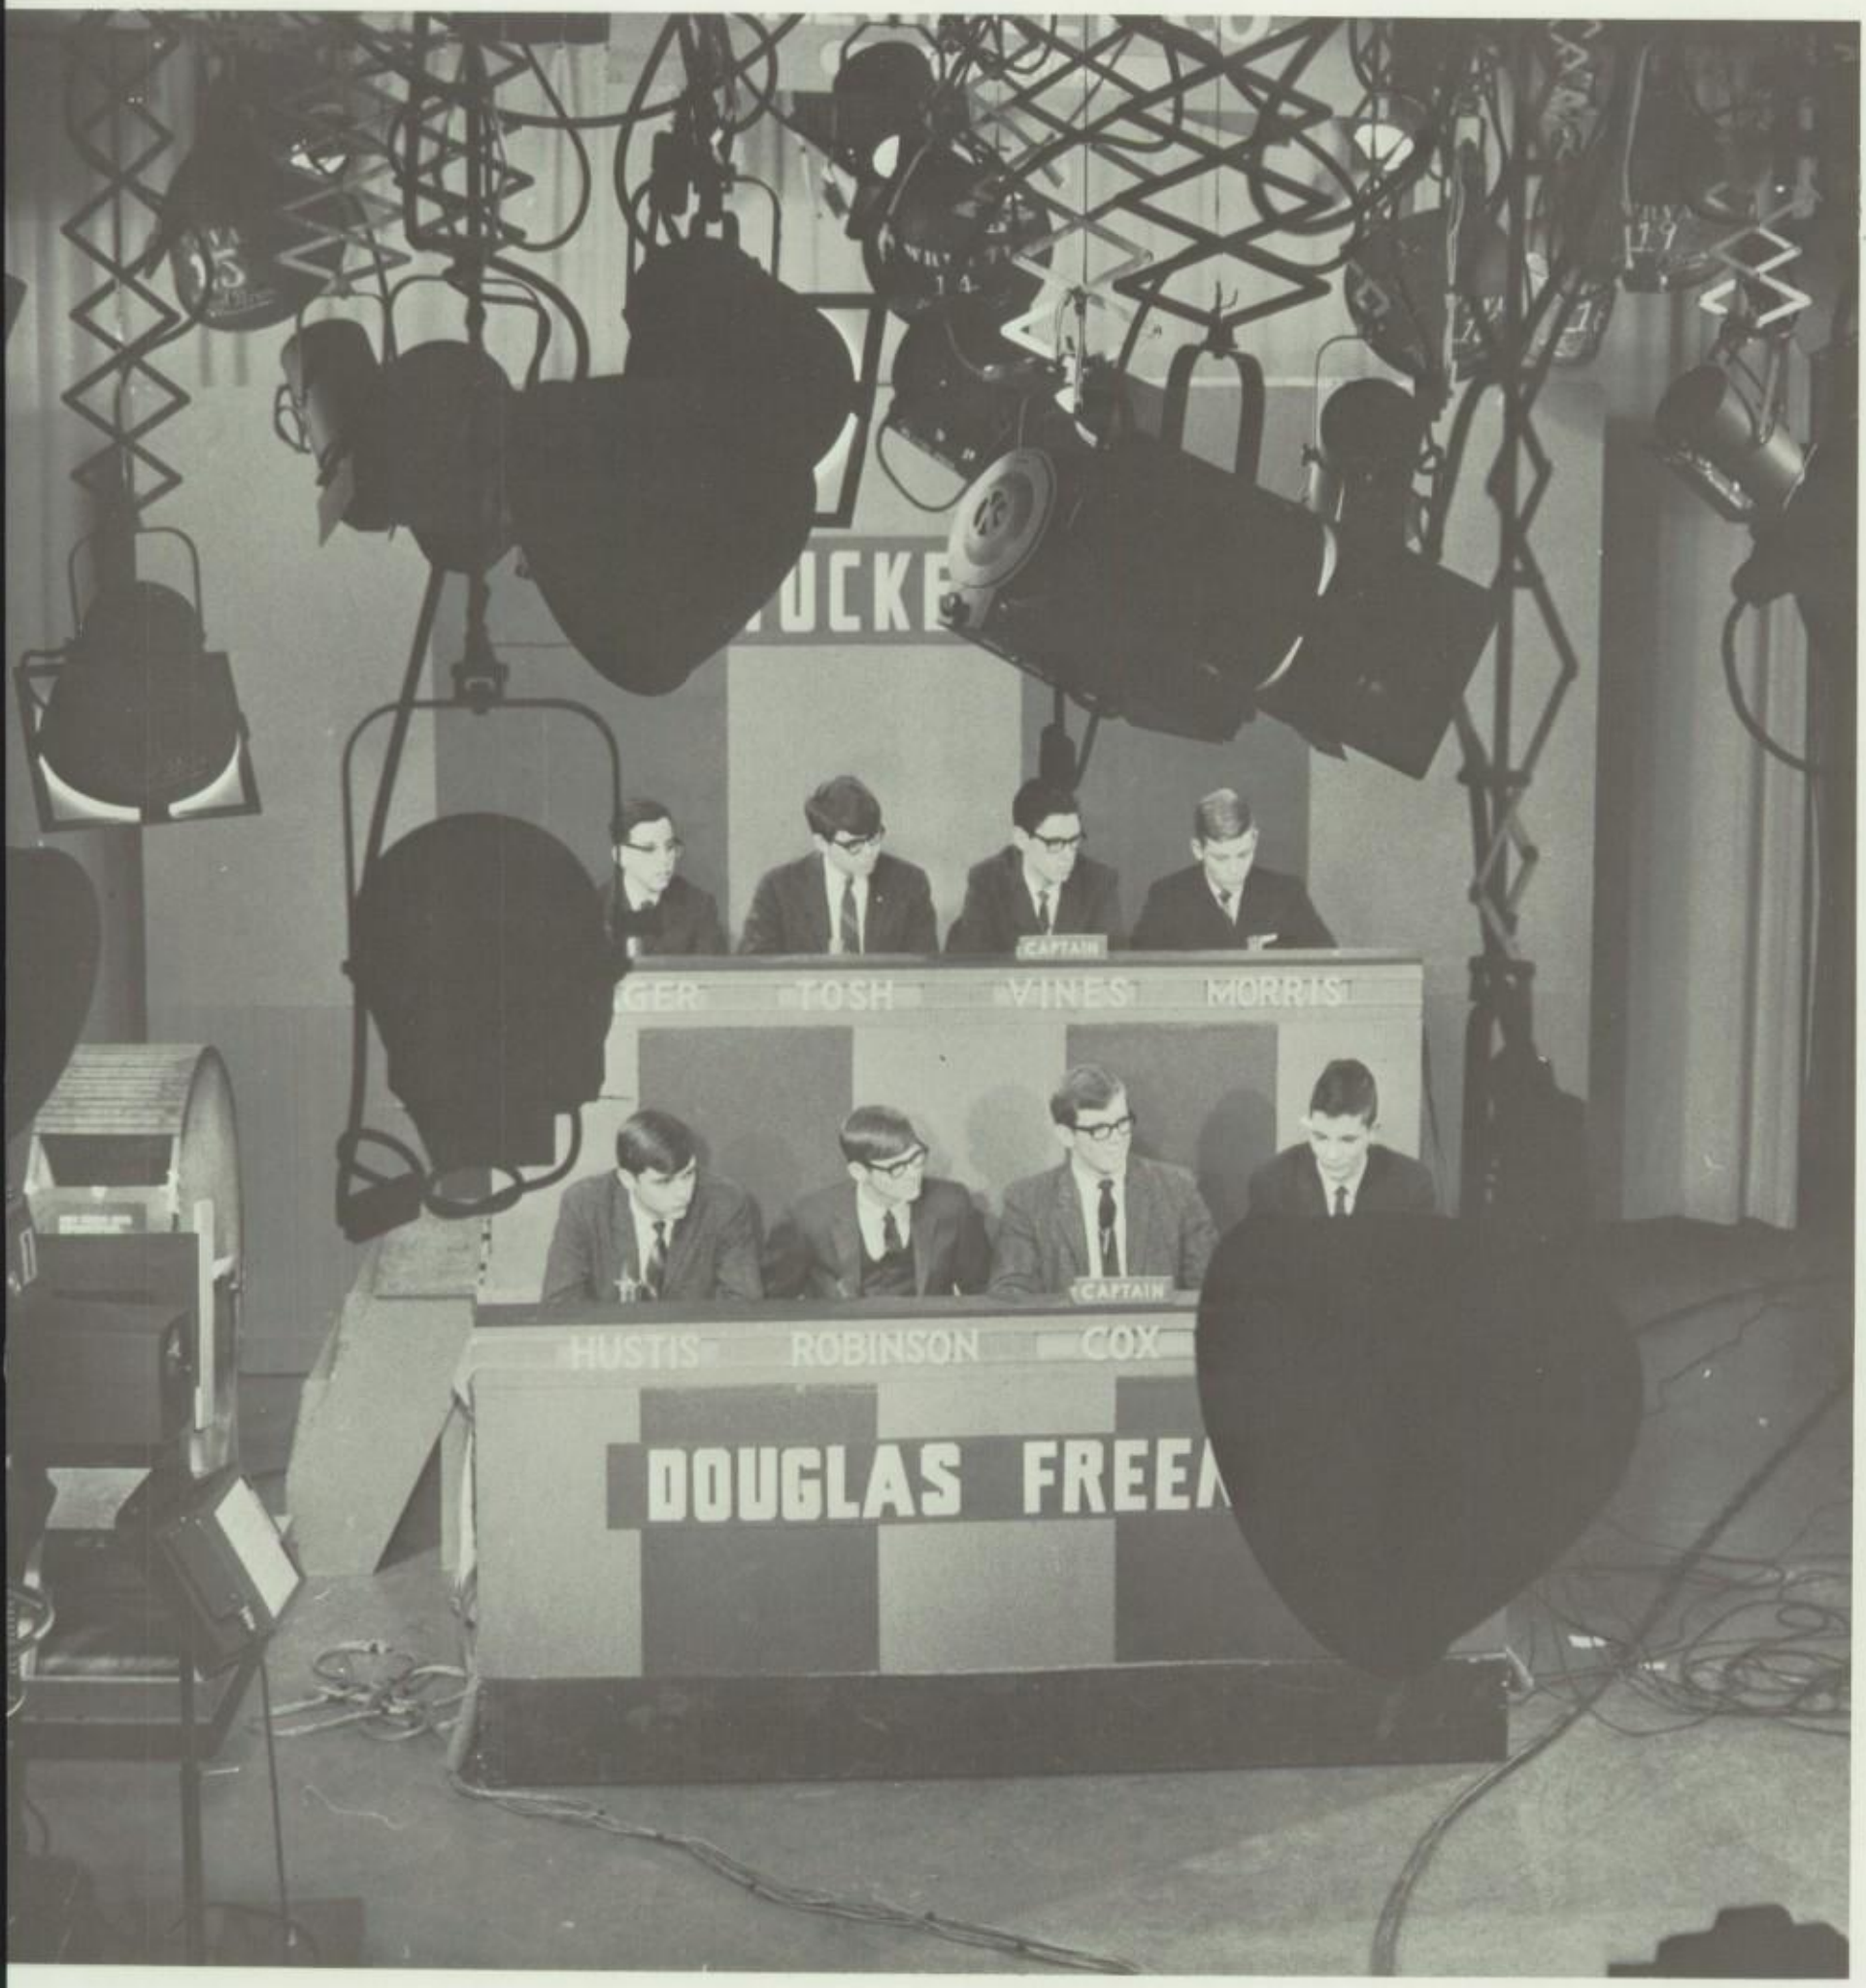
Daily the cafeteria staff served approximately 550 students. The staff was also responsible for preparing all foods to be served.

With the expansion of the school building, a new pantry, an office for the manager, and a completely equipped kitchen for the auxiliary cafeteria were to be added.

Lunchroom politics. Gesturing adamantly Bob Strotmeyer tries to convince Bob Cochran that his argument is reasonable and valid.

Students analyze experiences, develop insight





Spontaneous blares of the buzzer interrupt the momentary silence following the announcer's question, as High School Quiz Bowl members seek the recognition necessary to answer. These students accumulate points for displaying the knowledge acquired in their studies. At the same time, they broaden their scope of learning with the absorption of new concepts. Through quiet introspection, a Rebel analyzes ideas introduced to him by a teacher, a parent, or a friend.

Realities of high school temporarily baffle baby Rebels as year unfolds

Buried under forms, new books, and schedule cards, bewildered sophomores faced the realities of the high school world. Their feelings of confusion and uncertainty diminished as the youngest Rebels adjusted to the DSF curriculum.

Exploring the various phases of school life, sophs contributed their ideas and spirit to organizations, productions, sports, and publications.

Swirls of crepe paper, rolls of masking tape, and balls of twine cluttered the Freeman parking lot as the class of '70 became acquainted with its first Harvest Festival. Beth Lorraine represented the group in the parade.

Polar bears, Christmas trees, and snow drifts transformed the gym into an "Ice Palace." Sophomores used the $75 which they won in the PTA membership drive to finance the prom.

As the days lengthened and summer approached, the young Freemanites eagerly awaited the spirited activities of their junior year.

Familiar positions, new opportunities greet arrival of junior class

Gasps of surprise and delight accompanied the traditional murmur of excitement as Juniors returned to Douglas Freeman halls for their first day of school. The Class of '69 eagerly resumed their positions in clubs, publications, and athletics.

Under the leadership of President Mike Harman, the group selected Ann Carter Shiflett to represent them in the Harvest Festival Parade.

Adding to the excitement of Christmas, the arrival of school rings delighted Rebels in December. On behalf of the class, Pam Schuelke presented Mr. Mears with a 1969 ring.

Co-sponsoring Stunt-Talent night, the SCA and the Junior Class presented "Stevie Gleason Around the World." Profits from the three-night presentation totaled $650, which helped to finance their April prom, "Evening in Paris."

Inductions into various honorary societies climaxed the year for outstanding members of the class.

Upperclassmen embark on last year in preparation for future life

Sauntering confidently up the steps amid September breezes, upperclassmen entered DSF halls for their final year. Under the leadership of Steve Brummer, the class tackled its new responsibilities of leadership. SCA Big Brothers and Sisters acquainted sophomores with Freeman policies.

College applications, school transcripts, and term papers busied seniors throughout the year. Participation in extracurricular functions supplemented their activities.

Sweat shirts, portable steps, and a frizzled wig added the necessary touches to the senior play, "Time Out for Ginger." Using profits from the play, the Rebels created a Grecian city. Crepe paper and white columns made "Summer in Athens" a reality.

With the prom over, the business-like preparations for graduation began. In the dusk of early night, seniors took a last look at Douglas Freeman and turned to meet the challenges of the future.

Community projects utilize classroom concepts

Engaged in a discussion, ICT teacher John Briggs analyzes the progress which Robert Ford has made during his afternoon job as a mechanic. Departing from the DSF campus to the world of business, a Freemanite relies upon classroom experiences. He must learn to utilize them intelligently in his daily activities.

The arrival of class rings formally initiate the junior into Douglas Freeman. The bonds between classmates are more closely tied as each expresses his pride in this symbol of achievement.

Balfour supplies rings, senior announcements, graduation robes

The L. G. Balfour Comany plays an important part in the lives of every student of Douglas Freeman. A sophomore first meets the Balfour Company when Mr. Charles Motley, their representative, measures ring sizes and takes class ring orders. Each year Mr. Motley returns to deliver rings to the juniors. After measuring Freemanites for caps and gowns to be rented for the commencement exercise, the Balfour Company's Richmond office handles calling cards and announcements which are the proper graduation accessories for a senior Rebel.

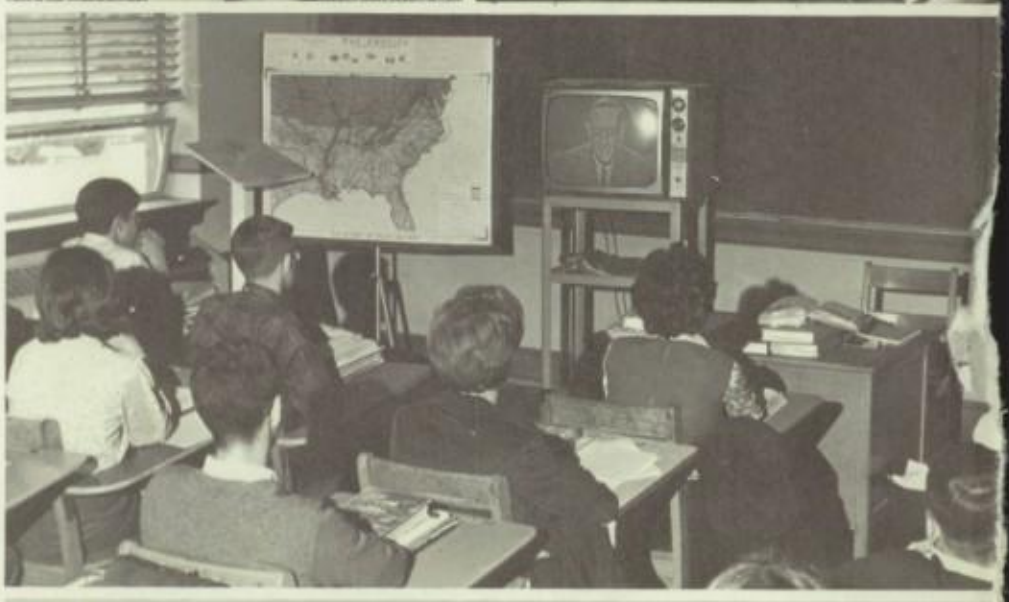
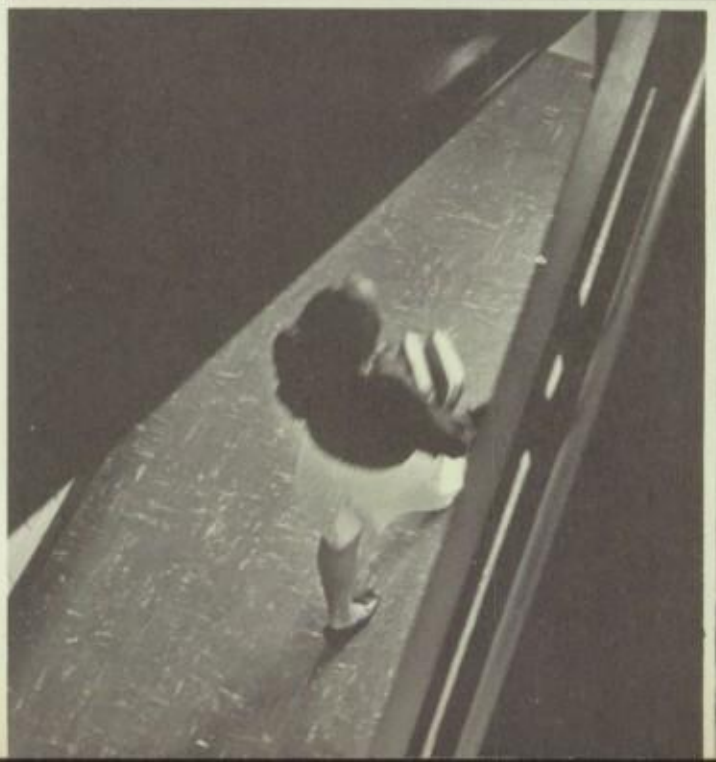
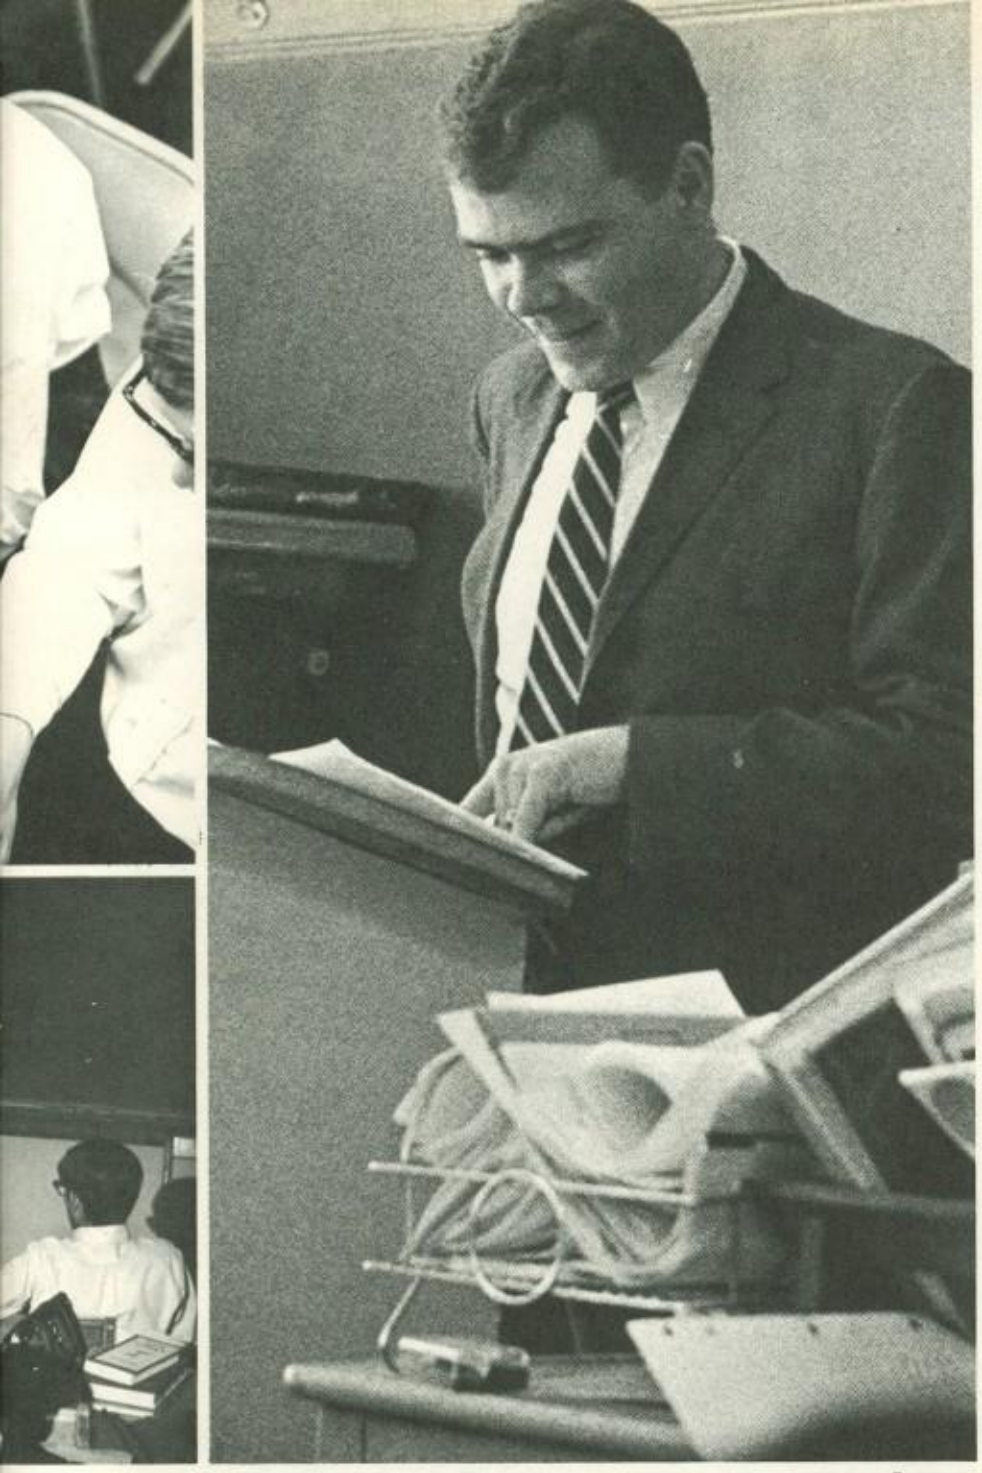
Basic precepts enrich new ideas, thoughts forge to adulthood

Silhouetted against the evening sunset, a lonely member of the Science Club mounts the hill beside the annex. Relying on previous classroom training, he will examine and record readings on the sling psychrometer, the thermometer, and the rain gauge.






Past experiences and education corroborate each student for a new environment in which he will apply his procured skills. Self-assurance creates the endurance essential throughout his adulthood.
